

LAUGHING FORD . . . at news conference.

Extended Relief Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford said Wednesday he'll consider asking Congress to extend tax reductions for another year if the economy does not improve during the remainder of 1975.

Expressing optimism that such steps might not be needed, Ford declared: "We made great strides in doing something about inflation and I'm optimistic we can do more about employment and unemployment."

But in response to a question at an outdoor White House news conference, he said "I would recommend to Congress that tax reductions be continued for another year" if the economy is not moving ahead, if present tax reductions seem beneficial and if extended cuts would not create too great a federal budget deficit.

The foreign policy highlight of the 29-minute nationally broadcast news conference was Ford's refusal to be drawn into any statement or speculation about whether the United States would use nuclear weapons if North Korea were to invade South Korea.

"I don't think it is appropriate for me to discuss at a press conference what our utilization will be of our tactical or strategic weapons," he declared in response to one question.

To another, he acknowledged that nuclear weapons are available for use and are flexible weapons. But he emphasized: "I am not either confirming it or denying it" — the possibility that nuclear weapons would be used.

His response on this 25th anniversary of the start of the Korean War followed by five days a statement by Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger that the United States "cannot foreclose any option" in the event of conflict in Korea.

In response, to a number of foreign policy questions, Ford also said:

—The United States will "not permit stalemate or stagnation in the Middle East," but has not yet completed its reassessment of policy in that troubled area.

Ford wouldn't speculate on whether Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's step-by-step diplomacy would be the next vehicle toward a possible Arab-Israeli settlement or, instead, all parties would sit down at Geneva.

He would say only that "the longer we have no movement toward peace in the Middle East, the more likely we are to have war and all of its ill ramifications."

—A U.S. investigation has determined that the Soviet Union has not violated the Strategic Arms Limitation Agreement.

On another Soviet-related matter, Ford said negotiations continue toward a European security conference this summer, but final compromises that would make the summit a certainty have not been reached.

He wouldn't discuss reports that Soviets have monitored Washington telephone conversations.

—Kissinger's blunt speech this week about U.S. allies does not signal a change in U.S. policy nor was it aimed particularly at Greece, Turkey, or any particular ally or alliance. Kissinger said foreign countries shouldn't think they are doing the United States a favor by being allies.

—The Mayaguez incident off Cambodia has shown European allies that "we are committed to alliance."

On a subject with both foreign and domestic overtones, Ford said an increase in oil prices by Middle East oil producers would be "unacceptable in the sense that we as a nation individually and we as a nation in conjunction with our allies are going to find some answer other than OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) oil."

He said the United States is seeking to solidify the organization of oil-consuming nations "so that we act in concert when we have to meet with the producing nations. Equally importantly, I'm trying to get the Congress to do something affirmatively about oil so that we do not have to worry about OPEC prices."

House Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill of Massachusetts objected to Ford's comment about Congress' record on energy.

O'Neill said the House has approved one major energy bill and will take up a second after the Fourth of July recess.

"I thought with piecemeal legislation we would try to put together an energy program," O'Neill said. "I thought that was the understanding at the last leadership meeting and I'm surprised he's going down this political path."

Another item on Ford's unacceptable list is the long-range forecast by some of his advisers that unemployment won't go down to 5% until 1980.

He said there were similar dismal long-range forecasts about inflation but that it had already descended to a 6% annual rate.

The unemployment projection, he said, "is an unacceptable figure. I hope they're wrong."

Ford did not specifically enumerate which provisions of the present tax relief program he would recommend for extension if he finds that conditions require continued tax stimulus.

The tax bill which Ford signed March 29 included among other things, an increase in standard reductions, reduced withholding rates, a special $30 per person tax credit, and another tax credit for lower income families.

The budget for the next fiscal year developed by congressional budget committees assumes that certain of the tax cuts will be continued in 1976.

Zoning Laws Proposal Draws Planners' Fire

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

After more than an hour of closed door debate Wednesday, the City-County Planning Commission reconvened and abruptly cancelled Thursday's meeting with the consultants updating the Comprehensive Plan.

The planners are unhappy over Barton-Aschman Associates' rewritten zoning laws, a one-inch thick document.

The proposed zoning laws were the main item on Thursday's agenda.

Commission Chairman George Williamson said the planners feel "there are some inadequacies and areas which need further work and clarification." The commission decided to call off Thursday's meeting rather than try to hash out the differences.

To Control Growth

The rewritten zoning laws for the city and county are to aid local officials in directing and controlling desired growth and development in Lincoln and Lancaster County.

The planners voted themselves into executive session after Williamson announced they needed to talk about some things "which could damage the reputation of an individual."

Apparently not wanting to air their disagreements with the way Barton-Aschman has been handling the consulting job in public, the commissioners decided to talk about it in private.

Wednesday's discontent over the zoning document marks the first time that the officials have publicly said they've been less than pleased with some of Barton-Aschman's work. The city is paying the firm $184,000 to help rewrite the Comprehensive Plan.

Misunderstanding?

Williamson pointed out after reconvening the meeting that the planners may have "misunderstood" what Barton-Aschman is proposing and consequently, want to work things out with the firm first.

When contacted in Chicago about the commission's action, Barton-Aschman vice president Bob Teska said he was "caught completely by surprise."

The consultants had planned to present the zoning document Thursday and answer questions, Teska said. Since the meeting was cancelled Teska said he'd have to wait and hear from the commission to get additional information.

The zoning document, which seemed to have created the furor, was described as a "boiler plate document" by one commissioner. Apparently, commissioners feel Barton-Aschman copied the zoning provisions from some textbook, not taking into account what exists in Lincoln now, they said.

Haven't Done Homework

One commissioner remarked, "I just don't think they've done their homework."

For example, he pointed out that in one section a proposed zoning administrator would be responsible to a city manager.

"We don't even have a city manager," Commissioner Jim Hacker said many of the recommendations seemed to be "out in left field."

Just exactly what Barton-Aschman is proposing is somewhat vague as yet, since no extra copies of the zoning document were available. Planning Director Doug Brogden said 50 copies have been distributed, but said he didn't know who distributed them and didn't have any extra copies in his office late Wednesday afternoon.

3 Areas Of Disagreement

Three major areas of disagreement between the planners and the consultants apparently revolve around the proposed zoning administrator, a proposed city-county zoning appeals board and proposed planned development units.

Commissioners said it's not clear what the duties of the administrator would be, whether the administrator would take over a portion of the planning director's job or replace the building inspector.

Commissioners said it's not clear what the duty of the zoning appeals board would be.

In some instances it appears that the board would act as an appeal body for decisions of the Planning Commission. In other cases it appears the board would refer applications to the commission. Presently, the commission is advisory only and makes recommendations on zoning and land use to the City Council.

Commissioners said it's not clear what is proposed for planned developments.

Planned Unit Development

Commission members and some developers have voiced support in the past for the creation of planned unit development (PUD) districts. With a PUD developers could put together residential, commercial and industrial uses in a track of land — uses which might otherwise be outlawed under the zoning districts.

The city allows a type of PUD development for residential uses now, called the community unit plan. Developers can modify the standard subdivision requirements, although not increasing the density.

No meeting to discuss those proposals has been set.

Said Hacker about the situation, "I guess we just have a lot of questions."

It Was Billionth, Then He Ate It

Minneapolis, Minn. (UPI) — Sweigert Meat Co. officials announced that a veteran employee had set a company record by producing his billionth wiener.

The company officials were planning to bronze the historic No. One Billion hot dog for posterity, but the veteran employee ate it.

The employee, Stan Popko, who has spent 48 years in the wiener business, says wieners are his favorite food.

Housing Bill Veto Override Fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic House failed Wednesday to override President Ford's veto of a $13 billion housing subsidy program for middle-income families, giving Ford yet another victory in his fight with Congress over the economy.

The 268-157 vote was 16 short of the two-thirds majority needed to override. The House has now sustained all of the six presidential vetoes it has acted on this year.

Afterward, Democrats in both the House and the Senate drew up compromise bills which they hoped would meet with Ford's approval.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Banking Committee, and Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., senior Republican, said their new bill would be passed by the Senate Thursday and sent to the House.

The key feature of their bill would give the President $10 billion of additional authority for buying home mortgages of $42,000 or less to provide construction of 300,000 homes.

Ford released $2 billion of such authority given him under previous legislation in announcing his veto.

House Democrats drew up a plan to remove cash payments in the original bill.

Ford said at a news conference the House decision to sustain the veto demonstrated "a growing sense of fiscal responsibility in the Congress."

He called on Congress to act quickly on legislation to provide loans for mortgage payment relief and guarantee insurance for lenders who refrain from mortgage foreclosures.

He said this legislation was less costly than the vetoed program and would "head off possible foreclosures of homes whose owners are temporarily out of work."

The President said the vote demonstrated "the realization by an increasing number of congressmen that economic recovery need not be bought at the price of unwise legislation and costly inflation."

"I am prepared to work with the Congress in reaching our common objectives: a revitalized housing industry, more jobs in construction and a sound economy," said Ford.

The Democrats' new compromise was proposed by Reps. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, and William A. Barrett, D-Pa., chairman of the committee's housing panel.

Their bill would:

— Reduce the level of the housing assistance program from $12 billion in mortgages to the level recommended by the President, $7.5 billion.

— Increase the interest rate on tandem plan mortgages from 7% to 7½%.

— Delete the $1,000 cash payments in the original bill.

Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich., ranking minority member of the House Banking Committee's housing panel, predicted that Ford's proposal might be ready for floor action a week after the holiday recess which ends July 8.

"If the Democrats are really interested in housing legislation," said Brown, "we'll put their feet to the fire on this one."

Supporters of the vetoed bill had said it would provide low interest and $1,000 tax breaks to some home buyers and provide up to 800,000 jobs in the construction industry.

Before the housing bill, the House had sustained presidential vetoes on strip mining, an emergency jobs bill, higher agriculture price supports, a tourism bill and oil import tariffs.

House Speaker Carl Albert told the House that Ford "is building the most monumental record of anti-jobs vetoes in the history of the Congress."

In the final count, 249 Democrats and 19 Republicans voted to override the veto while 122 Republicans and 35 Democrats voted with Ford.

Under Ford's compromise plan, there would be an immediate release of $2 billion in mortgage purchase authority. The Government National Mortgage Association would buy mortgages at a loss, thus pumping more funds into the housing market and encouraging lower interest rates.

The Ford administration released the money Tuesday, but it will be another month before applications begin to be processed.

To Halt

Newell labeled the firm "anti-union and union busting," and said the firm's advice was responsible for the county's "delaying tactics."

"If they (County Board) would give us what they pay that firm as some sort of settlement we would be all right," Newell said.

The union will take the unresolved question to the Court of Industrial Relations in hopes of a quick solution and Newell said, "We won't let cheap tactics stop us."

Newell said that the county would only negotiate such items as bulletin boards and grievance procedures, but not grievance procedures covering wages, hours or working conditions. "We can only grieve over bulletin boards," he said.

The union was voted in by county employees last fall and the first contract negotiations began last December. The county and union representatives have been holding weekly meetings since early April.

AFSCME-County Talks Come To Halt

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Contract negotiations between Lancaster County and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) representing the county employees came to a halt Wednesday.

Union representatives accused the county of bad faith negotiations and delaying tactics, while the county attorney simply said that the two sides had reached an impasse and that the matter would be taken to the State Court of Industrial Relations.

The county refused to negotiate certain items, including wages, holidays, hours of work and fringe benefits — areas that are governed by the state personnel law passed last year, according to County Atty. Ron Lahners.

"It is our position that the state law tells us the areas we cannot negotiate with the union," Lahners said Wednesday afternoon.

The county agreed to negotiate wages, hours and working conditions if the union won the election, which they did by a five to one margin, said Dave Newell, AFSCME representative.

"They are violating their own signed agreement," he said.

The question of whether these areas can be negotiated will be taken to the Court of Industrial Relations.

And the county has indicated it will appeal a negative decision at this level to the Supreme Court, said Newell, accusing the county of using delaying tactics.

The entire court process could take up to two years, he said.

The county agreed to negotiate these times, then delayed negotiations until they had worked out the personnel rules, which spell out holidays, fringe benefits, merit increases and other items the union contends are negotiable, he said.

The county also has hired a law firm, Nelson, Harding, Marchetty, Leonard and Tate in an advisory capacity, Newell said.

Terry To Seek Tax Reform If He Wins

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Terry Carpenter plans to unwrap a major tax reform package next January if he wins a court battle for his old legislative seat.

Carpenter said Wednesday his attorneys anticipate a decision within 10 to 14 days on whether Federal District Judge Warren Urbom of Lincoln will agree to accept the case.

"If he doesn't, that's it," Carpenter said in a telephone interview. "That would be the end of the handball game played earlier in District Court and the Legislature."

"If he does agree to look at the evidence, we think undoubtedly we will win the case."

Three voters in the 48th Legislative District have asked the court to compel election officials to count write-in votes cast for Carpenter last November which were thrown out as a result of misspellings, failure to include his first name or improper designation of the office he was seeking.

In enacting an election reform law this year validating most of those kind of write-in votes, Carpenter said, "the Legislature has already admitted it was wrong."

"They've corrected the law now. That's an admission."

"They used it in my case in a vindictive venture. But, now that they've taken care of me, they don't want it to happen again."

The new law, enacted as LB453, validates misspelled write-in votes if they are "reasonably close" to the correct spelling and surname-only votes when a candidate with that last name has been actively engaged in a write-in campaign and files a notarized affidavit of his intentions.

If he ultimately prevails, and wrests the 48th District seat from Sen. William Nichol of Scottsbluff next January, Carpenter noted, he has "a lot of fish to fry" in the Legislature.

Not only personalities, but issues.

Here's what he has in mind to rewrite revenue laws:

—reinstitution of the intangible property tax, repealed in 1967, to a level sufficient to raise $50 million in annual revenue. The tax is applied against cash, stocks and bonds.

—repeal of the personal property tax exemption for agricultural and business inventories and equipment enacted in 1972. Increasing in annual 12½% increments until the total exemption reaches 62½% in 1977, the tax relief measure will cost the state some $20 million in fiscal 1975-76.

—an immediate hike in the state's current gasoline tax of 8½ cents a gallon to increase road construction revenue at a time when gasoline prices are inevitably going up.

—a sharp increase in state auditing of income tax returns and sales tax reports.

"They just don't audit, and they don't want to," Carpenter said of the Department of Revenue.

"I think we're missing out on tremendous sums of money, particularly from those who live or are headquartered outside of this state."

In addition to the tax program, Carpenter said, he would attempt to repeal the 1975 law boosting the state's usury limit from 9% to 11%.

"Over a period of time, that's going to cost the citizens of my state more than the combined sales and income taxes," he said.

The usury rate is the interest ceiling on home mortgages.

CIA Agent Participated In Congressional Race

(c) Washington Star

Washington — William Colby, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, revealed Wednesday that CIA agent participated in a congressional campaign without the knowledge of the candidate and filed reports on campaign activities to the CIA's "Operation Chaos" campaign against domestic antiwar groups.

In testimony to a House subcommittee, Colby conceded that the activity was not proper and he pledged, "it will not occur again."

Colby refused to identify the congressional candidate or the agent. But he said the candidate did not realize that the agent worked for the CIA.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., asked Colby if he was aware of an agent being placed in a congressional campaign.

"Not placed," Colby responded. "I am aware of a CIA agent, visiting America from abroad, who was invited by a candidate to accompany him for a few days. The candidate did not know that he was a CIA agent."

Conyers asked if the candidate won or lost. "I think he lost," Colby said.

"That follows," Conyers said with a touch of sarcasm.

"The CIA had nothing to do with him losing," Colby said.

Colby said he did not identify the candidate because to do so might reveal the identity of the agent, who is still working for the CIA overseas.

"I take a strong position on protecting the identity of CIA agents," Colby said. "We are having a hard time just now."

Conyers responded, "I take a strong position on the CIA helping people win or lose congressional elections. We don't know if there were more (cases of this type)."

"There were no more," Colby said.

In response to a question from Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee's subcommittee on government information and individual rights, Colby confirmed that the agent filed reports to Operation Chaos.

"Is that proper?" Mrs. Abzug asked.

"No," Colby said. "I have corrected the errors of the past. It will not occur again."

Colby also said the CIA has files on between 70 and 75 members of Congress. He said that if any member asked for information from his file, the agency would provide it. He said about 30 lawmakers have filed such requests.

The hearing was frequently acrimonious. Colby insisted that further investigations could damage the nation's intelligence system while Democrats on the committee accused the director of failing to provide adequate information to permit the Congress to supervise the CIA.

"The United States has developed the best intelligence service in the world," Colby said. "We must not destroy it through sensational or irresponsible exposure."

Recovery Slow For Car Market

Detroit (AP) — Worker layoffs in the nation's ailing auto industry were further reduced this month as mid-June sales reflected another sign of a slow but rising tide of recovery in the new car market.

Ford Motor Co. said Wednesday mid-June sales were up 7% from mid-May, but still down 22% from mid-June in 1974. Industry car sales for the 10-day period were the worst in 13 years.

And General Motors announced it is offering an extended 60,000-mile or five-year warranty on four-cylinder engines which come on Chevrolet Vegas and Monzas, Pontiac Astres and small panel trucks.

GM customers have complained about overheating problems with the aluminum engine, and last year GM offered to make free repairs on engines with less than 50,000 miles of use. The firm said it corrected the problem in the spring of 1973.

The new engine warranty is the longest in the U.S. industry and replaces GM's current 12,000-mile or 12-month plan. The firm said it takes effect Wednesday and will be available to current owners of cars with the engines for up to $48, depending upon mileage.

GM's Chevrolet Division said Wednesday it recalled 3,300 production workers from indefinite layoff since June 1, and expected to bring more back by mid-summer.

The Chevrolet recall and the return of 500 Buick Division workers announced last week in Flint, Mich., reduces GM indefinite layoffs to 98,200. The auto giant has 400,000 hourly employees.

A GM spokesman said there have been further worker layoffs but the number won't be available until final tabulations of recalls at manufacturing plants are completed at the end of the month.

Meanwhile, Ford, the last of the U.S. car makers to report mid-June sales, said it sold 57,724 cars in the period, down from 73,974 a year ago. The other three major companies released sales on Tuesday.

The Ford figures raised industry sales for the 10-day span to 213,750, down 17% from a year ago.

However, the daily rate was up 5% from mid-May levels, which normally outpace mid-June deliveries by 2 to 3%, and industry analysts said the figures were further evidence of the industry's gradual improvement since last winter, when sales hit bottom.

Year-to-date sales of 3,013,538 trail last year's depressed levels by 18 per cent and are running at a 14-year low.

The auto companies have reduced worker layoffs as sales pick up, but 151,500 of their 712,000 hourly workers are still on layoff. Furloughs crested at 270,000 in the winter.

American Motors Corp. said all its plant will operate next week but 557 hourly workers will stay on indefinite layoff. The other companies were to announce next week's production plans on Thursday.

Union sources said Chrysler will recall nearly 5,000 workers from layoff during the next six weeks while restoring several assembly-plant second shifts. Chrysler, with 32,500 of 114,000 hourly workers on layoff, would not confirm the report.

Actress Suing Ex-Hubby's Wife

Milan, Italy (UPI) — A Milan court Tuesday set Nov. 25 to hear a defamation suit brought by actress Gina Lollobrigida against her former husband's second wife.

The actress accused Austrian soprano Ute De Vargas of defaming her in an interview published December 1973, in a Milan newspaper which quoted the singer as saying, among other things, "Lollo would be on the path to the sunset now."

London's Woes 'Not Serious'

London — London's fiscal problems are less serious than New York's, largely because of its much closer relationship with the central government, making bankruptcy out of the question unless Britain itself goes broke. But wages and debts are soaring, with debt servicing charges running about 17% as in New York. With warnings coming from the central government, capital spending is gradually slowing and there have been small cutbacks in services, but no layoffs of municipal workers.

Israeli Envoy Hints Changes

Washington — Malcolm Toon, the new United States ambassador to Israel, said in Washington that Israel needs some rectifications of its pre-1967 borders for security as part of an overall Middle East settlement. In a related development, the State Department reproached Israel for press leaks about confidential diplomatic exchanges.

FEA Aide Accuses Carey

Washington — A former Federal Energy Administration aide told the agency and the New York Times that between December 1973, and March 1974, his office received six to eight telephone calls from the office of Rep. Hugh Carey, now governor of New York, on behalf of a licensing deal involving Edward M. Carey, his brother. The aide, who withheld his name, said he had received two of the calls personally.

Airplane Death Toll Up

New York — The death toll in Tuesday's crash of an Eastern Airlines jetliner landing at Kennedy International Airport rose to 110 with the discovery that a two-month-old infant had not been listed on the manifest. Ten of the 14 survivors were reported in critical condition. Pilots of other airliners reported vicious down drafts creating severe hazards during the landing approach at that time. The National Transportation Safety Board opened its investigation at the scene.

Northrop Employed Generals

New York — At least seven high-ranking United States military officers, some of them four-star generals, have been employed by the Northrop Corp. in recent years after they retired from active duty to perform a variety of sensitive and in some cases secret tasks, according to documents that have been released by a Senate subcommittee.

Divorcee Says Jury Law Biased

San Antonio, Tex. (UPI) — Divorcee Basil Archey went before a justice of the peace Wednesday to fight sex discrimination against men.

The thin, spectacled Archey, 47, faced a misdemeanor criminal charge of being absent from jury service without an excuse, an offense punishable by a fine of $10 to $100 on conviction.

Archey contended a law automatically exempting from jury service mothers of children under age 10 also should be applied to fathers with young children in their custody and refused to serve on a jury in district court when summoned on June 3.

The credit executive, father of two young sons, based his contention on the 1972 Equal Rights Amendment to the Texas Constitution and said he was ready to take the issue to the highest court necessary.

Archey is chairman of the local Texas Fathers for Equal Rights, a group of divorced men and grandparents of children from broken homes which actively lobbied for approval of the federal ERA.

Archey's group has become allied with several women's rights groups and the feminists are backing his legal challenge financially and morally.

He said his challenge of the Texas jury exemption law was only part of his group's plans for attacking state laws which allegedly discriminate against males.

The primary object of Texas Fathers for Equal Rights, he said, are domestic relations courts which Archey claims traditionally favor women in divorce and child custody cases to the detriment of children and fathers alike.

Archey said a suit already is being drawn up asking federal courts to intervene in divorces on grounds state courts exercise sex discrimination against men in such cases.

Police Not Cheap

OTTAWA (AP) — The federal cost for police security at the Olympic games in Montreal in 1976 will be at least $90 million, the House of Commons learned. The bill is 45 times greater than the $2 million in federal funds allotted for grants to Canadians training for the Olympics.

Hiss Allowed To See 'Pumpkin Papers' Films

Washington (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi Wednesday ordered the Justice Department to let Alger Hiss examine the celebrated "Pumpkin Papers" microfilms that led to his 1950 perjury conviction following allegations he once passed U.S. state secrets to Russia.

Hiss sued under the Freedom of Information Act for access to the five rolls of microfilmed State Department documents — popularly known as the Pumpkin Papers — that were used as evidence in the perjury trial.

Richard M. Nixon, then a young California congressman, said he obtained the microfilms from a hollowed-out pumpkin during a Cold War spy hunt. Nixon said he was led to the papers by Whittaker Chambers, a journalist and confessed ex-Communist spy who was a chief prosecution witness against Hiss.

Hiss, a former high-ranking State Department official, still denies Chambers' charges that he had funneled secret State Department documents to the Russians in the 1930s. The jury convicted Hiss of perjury in 1950 and he spent 44 months in prison.

The highly publicized trial gave a strong boost to Nixon's political stature.

Levi announced he had decided to make the film available to Hiss after it has been given a national security screening to determine whether any portions should remain classified.

The films are now sealed in five canisters in the office of U.S. Atty. Paul Curran in New York City, he said.

Quinlan J. Shea Jr., chief of the Justice Department's freedom of information appeals unit, told reporters he would be "really surprised if much turns up that is classified."

"Basically," Shea said, "we will be looking at 1948 documents with 1975 eyes."

Shea said Curran's assistants have already checked the canisters and found the film is intact, but there is concern that they may become damaged or quickly deteriorate with exposure to light.

Hiss has indicated he may seek exoneration from his perjury conviction if he can determine by analyzing the film that it was manufactured later than the year in which Chambers testified he exposed it, 1938.

The film had been placed in a pumpkin for safekeeping by Chambers during the congressional investigation of his charges against Hiss. It fell short of proving Chambers' contention Hiss as a Communist Party member he had known by another name in the 1930s, but it contributed to Hiss' conviction on charges of lying about his past.

Shea said Hiss will get a copy of the film and will be allowed to look at the original, but he said he doubts the Freedom of Information Act gives Hiss a right to conduct tests.

"If I were Mr. Hiss, I would ask Mr. Levi to let me do it," Shea said.

Shea said the film probably will be flown to Washington so the required copies can be made in the FBI laboratory.

Copies showing the contents of the film, except for parts that may be blanked out for security reasons, will also be made available to the public.

Levi also ordered the film made available to William H. Reuben, a researcher who joined with Hiss in his suit, and Stephen W. Salant of Washington and Dr. Peter H. Irons, a University of Massachusetts political scientist, who sought access to the films in separate suits.

Levi also ordered the film made available to William H. Reuben, a researcher who joined with Hiss in his suit, and Stephen W. Salant of Washington and Dr. Peter H. Irons, a University of Massachusetts political scientist, who sought access to the films in separate suits.

Nebraskans Vote Against Override

Washington (AP) — Nebraska Republican Reps. John McCollister, Charles Thone and Virginia Smith all voted against the override of a presidential veto Wednesday.

The override, which failed by 16 votes, was on a bill to provide a housing subsidy program to middle income families.

Six-Year Proceedings End; Brewster Fined

Washington (UPI) — Protesting his innocence to the end, former Sen. Daniel B. Brewster, D-Md., pleaded "no contest" Wednesday to accepting an illegal gratuity and was fined $10,000.

Chief U.S. District Judge George L. Hart, Jr., saying, "I think it's time to say 'enough,'" ended the nearly six-year proceedings against Brewster by levying the maximum fine but omitting any jail sentence. Brewster could have been jailed for two years.

Brewster pleaded "nolo contendere" — tantamount to a plea of guilty — to a single charge of receiving a $4,500 payment from the Spiegel mail order firm in April 1967, although Justice Department Prosecutor Stuart Gerson said the one-time Maryland lawyer actually received three such payments, some of which he used for personal purposes.

"I did not accept a bribe," Brewster said in reading a statement to the court in a firm voice. "I gave nothing in return for the contribution, I made no bargain whatsoever, and I also did not put the contribution to any personal use."

'Mr. Muscles' Wins Return Match

Paul Graham, billed as Australia's "Mr. Muscles," was the scratched and bleeding winner of a return wrestling bout with an out-of-form, 690-pound alligator. It took Graham 12 minutes to put a sleeper hold on the reptile and turn it over on its back. The alligator's tail twice sent Graham into the mud, cutting forehead and arm. The alligator — which put Graham in the hospital two weeks ago after trying to eat him — appeared unharmed.

Farm Women 'Silent Majority'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Farm women are the "silent majority of the world" who raise much of the food in poor nations but are denied the means to increase production, say panelists at the International Women's Year conference.

Making life better for 100 million rural women is thus directly and dramatically tied to an adequate world food supply, they said.

The conference also received a proposal from the U.S. delegation intended to assure that women are incorporated into future economic growth programs in developing countries.

Patricia Hutar, chief of the American delegation, said the proposed resolution would pay special attention to incorporating women into aid programs, evaluate them to make sure the programs succeed at such goals and start new research to find out what else needs to be done to help women.

Mrs. Hutar called the plan "a common bond between the developed and the developing nations." She said it would insure the full and equal participation of women in the Third World nations.

Danish economist Ester Boserup, chairwoman of the panel on rural women, said women do up to 70% of the farming in Africa and much of it in Asia and South America.

"We must persuade people to stay on the land if we are not all to starve in the years to come. But we do not have the right to expect them to do so under the present conditions," said

The prosecution in Brewster's 1972 trial claimed he received the illegal gratuities from a Spiegel lobbyist for opposing higher rates for bulk mailing.

"The litigation has taken a heavy toll — on my family, on my friends and supporters and on me," said Brewster, once considered the "golden boy" of Maryland politics and now a farmer.

Obviously happy at being spared a jail sentence, he left the courtroom smiling.

Hart told Brewster that it "seems rather clear" that much of his problem was caused by alcoholism — "a very promising political career has been destroyed."

Hart said he agreed with Brewster that he believed the prosecution was contrary to the speech and debate clause of the Constitution, but that the Supreme Court had ruled to the contrary.

Moments later, Hart reduced the 18-month sentence of Cyrus T. Anderson, Spiegel's Washington lobbyist, who was convicted with passing the money to Brewster, to the six weeks that he had served in prison. Anderson is suffering from heart enlargement and high blood pressure and the judge said his health was "precarious."

Brewster served in the House for four years and was elected to the Senate in 1962 where he served until his defeat by Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., in 1968.

Brewster was indicted by a grand jury the following year on five counts of bribery. Hart dismissed the indictment in 1970 on grounds the Constitution's speech and debate clause gave Brewster immunity from prosecution for acts committed while a senator, but the Supreme Court overruled Hart in 1972 and ordered him to stand trial, which he did later that year.

"Despite the connotations that may be derived from the gratuity statute, I do not believe that the acceptance of a political contribution from a supporter is a corrupt act," Brewster said.

He said the money was spent for routine office and political expenses.

A plea of "nolo contendere" means that the defendant does not contest the charge although it carries the full implication of a plea of guilty.

Court Deals Poor Blacks Setback In Zoning Case

Washington (AP) — Victims of job discrimination scored a double victory Wednesday in the Supreme Court, but the court handed a setback to poor blacks fighting exclusion from the suburbs.

In a 7 to 1 decision on a suit by black workers in a Southern paper mill, the court held that:

—Victims of job discrimination need not show that the discrimination was intentional to collect back pay.

—Companies must demonstrate that tests given to job applicants have a strong relationship to the job in question.

In the housing case, the court divided 5 to 4 in rejecting a challenge to a zoning ordinance in the Rochester, N.Y. suburb of Penfield. The decision is expected to make it more difficult for inner-city residents to combat suburban housing restrictions in court.

To do so, said the justices, a plaintiff "must allege specific, concrete facts demonstrating that the challenged practices harm him, and that he personally would benefit in a tangible way from the court's intervention."

Reaching its more difficult decisions as it nears the end of its current term, probably next Monday, the court also decided two other cases by a 5 to 4 margin.

In one, the court held that federal law does not give labor unions or labor leaders the automatic right to trial by jury on contempt of court charges.

In the other case, the court ruled that its decision two years ago that warrantless arrests by roving Border Patrol agents are unconstitutional — unless the agent has probably cause to suspect a crime — should not be applied retroactively.

In the employment case, Justice Potter Stewart said for the court that awarding back pay only on the basis of bad faith by the employer would make it "a punishment for moral turpitude rather than a compensation for workers' injuries."

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger dissented, saying that "if employers are to be assessed back pay even where they have attempted in good faith to conform to the law, they will have little incentive to eliminate marginal practices."

Justice Harry A. Blackmun, although he concurred in the main outlines of the decision, also said he believed courts should be free to refuse back pay on grounds the employer acted in good faith.

Burger and Blackmun also disagreed with what Burger called the majority's insistence on "slavish adherence" to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's (EEOC) guidelines for job tests.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. did not participate in the decision, which arose from a suit by black employees of the Albemarle Paper Co. and its Roanoke Rapids, N.C. pulp and paper plant.

The NAACP Legal Defense Fund, representing the workers, described it as the most important employment discrimination case since 1971.

In that year, the Supreme Court held that an employer cannot use a test which screens out blacks unless he can prove that the test is job-related. That decision did not lay down rules as to how an employer is supposed to meet this requirement.

Albemarle responded to the 1971 ruling by hiring an industrial psychologist to establish that its tests were job-related.

In Wednesday's ruling the court found that the study conducted by the psychologist was defective, partly because it relied too heavily on ratings by supervisors.

The guidelines of the EEOC declare among other things that supervisory ratings alone are not enough.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce argued in a brief submitted to the court that the commission's guidelines are too restrictive and would force employers to engage in unlawful quota hiring.

Zaire Patrol Boat Foils Rescue Try

Dar Es Salaam, Tanzania (UPI) — A fishing boat trying to pick up three students held hostage by African guerrillas was fired on by a Zaire patrol boat on Lake Tanganyika and forced to turn back, foiling a rescue plan within minutes of success, witnesses said Wednesday.

The vessel, reportedly carrying a huge ransom to pay off Marxist guerrillas holding the hostages, was just minutes away from land when the high-speed patrol boat appeared, the witnesses said.

It began firing on the rescue ship, driving it back and running a carefully worked out plan to free the students — two Americans and a Dutch woman — captured five weeks ago from a Tanzanian wildlife preserve.

The fishing boat left the Tanzanian lake port of Kigoma Tuesday to pick up the students on the Zaire side of the water after a compromise deal had been worked out with the rebels, the witnesses said.

However, they said, as it approached the Zaire shore where the hostages were signaling with mirrors, the patrol boat appeared and, apparently mistaking it for a smuggling ship, began shelling the water in front of it.

It immediately turned back to Tanzania and the students fled with their captors into the bush.

The sources said the father of one of the students watched the entire episode from a high bluff on the Tanzanian side of the lake and was "furious" when the rescue plan collapsed.

Sources in Dar Es Salaam familiar with the kidnap case said the fishing boat apparently carried a large ransom which was to be handed over to the rebels in exchange for the students' lives.

The families and friends of the students — Carrie Jane Hunter, 21, of Atherton, Calif., and Kenneth S. Smith, 22, of Garden Grove, Calif., both Stanford University students, and Emile Bergman of Holland — reportedly had been trying to raise $500,000 to meet the rebels' ransom demand.

Parents and officials from Stanford University went to Kigoma Wednesday, raising hopes that the students may still be released shortly.

The entire negotiations have been clouded in secrecy and it was unclear how Tuesday's unsuccessful exchange had been arranged, but sources in Dar Es Salaam said both sides were now trying desperately to set up another rendezvous.

It appeared that the Zaire government, which has been reluctant to give any help in the kidnap case, was unaware of the rescue attempt and that the patrol vessel may have thought the fishing vessel was involved in a smuggling operation.

A fourth hostage, Barbara B. Smuts of Ann Arbor, Mich., was released a month ago by the guerrilla members of the People's Revolutionary Party.

Disaster Is Not Permanent

President Ford told Republican contributors at a White House meeting Tuesday night that the GOP has made remarkable progress in the ten months he has been in office.

He's right, of course. At this point it does not appear as if Ford is automatically guaranteed nomination, although he acts that way, nor is he a cinch bet for election. The Republican Party can claim only about 20-25% of the registered electorate and that percentage is not climbing—at least not to any significant degree.

Yet the GOP is in markedly better shape than it was last August.

A year ago an agonized Republican Party was watching its leader being pressured to resign in disgrace. Many of the party elders were openly rejecting and renouncing Richard Nixon. Earlier, the party's leading conservative spokesman had resigned the vice presidency in disgrace. Election money sources were drying up. The GOP bombed in the congressional and state elections in 1974. In the intervening months since then Republicans of the right have wondered aloud if the party is still the proper vehicle to carry their standard. Conservative alternatives have been explored. Some normally wise and prudent political observers have predicted the death of the Republican Party and hence the two-party system as we know it.

But its new leader is not about ready to play dead.

It has been a remarkable yet curious performance.

When Ford began his presidency amidst all the good will in the world, he gave (in terms of good will) as good as he got. Then, with the pardon business and the hopeless Whip Inflation Now program serving as examples, Ford conducted his job as if he was all thumbs and had two left feet — not to mention the feeling people had that the pardon was not all as pure and simple as he said it was.

More recently the President has made some strides in foreign affairs — his acknowledged weak point — and has had the good fortune to be able to appear as a leader in the vacuum created by a huge but impotent Democratic majority in Congress. Though Ford is not offering positive leadership to the nation, he has managed to rally sufficient strength from his own party and the opposition to blunt the once-ambitious program of the congressional majority.

He has Speaker Albert throwing in the towel for this session at least. The Oklahoma Democrat is now talking in terms of the Democrats starting to achieve their legislative goals in 1977, when he hopes there will be a Democrat in the White House to cooperate.

So Ford has the Democrats in Congress on the run — temporarily at least; he has for the moment defused the conservative threat to his own political plans; he is steadily building a reputation in foreign affairs; the GOP money wells are beginning to trickle again; Ford is running better than Kennedy in the opinion polls, the Democrats are badly divided over a presidential candidate and Ford, although not nearly a shoo-in, has to be considered at least an even bet for election to the presidency in his own right.

Not bad for an appointed president who some say played football without his helmet and for a minority party which was on the ropes just ten months ago.

This is a repeat of the lesson of 1964 and Barry Goldwater: one debacle does not a funeral make.

A Matter Of Attitude

The Lancaster County Board Wednesday unanimously approved an amusement license for Belmont Enterprises to hold a outdoor music concert at Arrow Airport Saturday. The license was granted with the stipulations that the promoters follow security instructions issued by the sheriff and that the promoters will not dispense alcoholic beverages.

The board's action was a logical disposition of the license application, even in the face of some public and law enforcement sentiment which runs against so-called "rock concerts."

Commissioner Bruce Hamilton hit the nail squarely on the head Tuesday when he referred to conflicting attitudes. The police and public seem to have little problem with the thousands of cars which move into the Nebraska football stadium area on game days, nor is there a big outcry about the drinking which goes on during the games, Hamilton pointed out. "Outdoor music concerts are popular with the young. These people deserve to enjoy this as much as others deserve to enjoy Billy Graham," he said, adding that the community should encourage activities which are popular with different segments of the population with government intervening only if adequate health and safety measures have not been taken.

A point well made. Too many folks seem to condone only that which pleases them. It's good that the county board is disposed to treat the differing elements of the community equally.

JAMES RESTON

Portugal And Detente

LISBON — The United States government is playing a very quiet and cautious role here in the Portuguese crisis. Its stake in the future of Portugal, whose bases influence the military strategy of the Atlantic and the western gateway to the Mediterranean, is very large, but Washington is staying out of the internal struggles for the present.

Though Portugal is a military ally in NATO, the orders from Washington to Brig. Gen. Erskine Wigley, U.S. base commander in the Azores, are to avoid interference or even political discussion of the Portuguese revolution. The Ford administration has offered about $25 million in economic aid, which the military junta here has been too busy to consider seriously, and Frank Carlucci, U.S. ambassador in Lisbon, has been in a hospital in Madrid during the last 10 days of the crisis. So things have been comparatively calm from the American point of view.

Still, there is some evidence here that Washington is beginning to reconsider its original approach to the Portuguese situation. At first Secretary of State Kissinger was reported to have assumed that the communists were going to win this struggle and to have suggested privately that maybe it would be more practical to deal with this "reality" than to pretend that the communists were not the dominant force.

The British, the French and the West Germans disagreed rather vigorously with this view. They insisted, while the worst might happen, that the moderate forces in Portugal still had a chance and should be supported, and also that the play of other forces outside Portugal would begin to influence the internal struggle.

This prediction now seems to be coming true. The turmoil here has wrecked the tourist trade and dried up foreign investment and Portuguese remittances from outside the country. The Vatican has intervened to defend the Catholic community from the anti-clerical demonstrators of the Portuguese extreme left. And the military junta's clumsy suppression of the independent newspaper, Republica, has produced a torrent of criticism all over the free world.

Also, Alvaro Cunhal, the Communist Party leader here, is being embarrassed by the cries of the Maoists, Trotskyists and others on the extreme left who want to abolish the political parties and the constituent assembly and establish a militant government of workers councils.

Even Moscow is apparently unhappy with this vicious conflict between the Portuguese Communists and the anarchists on the extreme left.

The Soviet Union has larger political objectives of its own this summer. It wants the United States and the Western allies to go to a European security conference in Helsinki at the end of July and sign a document recognizing the Soviet military conquests of the last world war and the territorial boundaries established in Eastern Europe since then. Moscow also wants acceptance in the West of the principle of non-interference in the social and political structure of its allies in Eastern Europe.

Accordingly, Portugal is no longer a Lisbon story or even a national story, but is becoming a test of the NATO alliance and the meaning of "detente" between East and West.

The Socialists here in Lisbon charge that the Portuguese Communist Party is "totally dependent" on funds from Moscow; that it has over 2,000 full-time paid workers; that it is well-armed — all financed by Moscow — and that its leader, Senhor Cunhal, is subject to Moscow's direction. He denies the charge vigorously and even scoffs at it, and so does Moscow.

But a major problem remains. The basis of "detente" between East and West is that the strategic status quo between the two shall not be upset.

It is on this principle that the so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine" rests — namely, that the West should not interfere in the communist political and social structure of its allies in Eastern Europe.

Nevertheless, Moscow regards a communist uprising in Portugal, Cuba, or anywhere else as a natural and legitimate "war of revolution" which all communists have an obligation to assist.

The importance of Portugal, therefore, may very well be that the West will finally use it to draw the line and insist that Moscow cannot have it both ways.

If the strategic status quo is to be maintained, there must be non-interference both ways. Or if Moscow is to be free to intervene in the politics of Western Europe, then it follows in accordance with Moscow's own principle of "reciprocity" that the West should be able to insist on the same freedom to intervene in the politics of Eastern Europe.

Nobody is quite saying this out loud here as yet, but it is being discussed in Lisbon and elsewhere in Europe privately, and there's reason for saying that the point has already been made to top officials of the Soviet Union. Indeed, President Giscard d'Estaing of France said as much in an interview with this reporter.

It is not clear that Moscow is entirely responsible for the uprising here against over 40 years of right-wing dictatorship. There undoubtedly is a popular revolt afoot to a certain extent. Nor is it clear that these outside forces are responsible for the more moderate tone of the Portuguese military council in recent days. But something is obviously changing their tune — some combination of outside economic, political, and religious pressure.

JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — It is the American tradition that the press may publish what it knows and may seek to learn what it can. Never in our history has the press been a better watchdog.

Justice Potter Stewart, a solid conservative who was appointed to the Supreme Court by ex-President Eisenhower, acknowledged recently: "The American press in the past ten years, and particularly in the past two years, has performed precisely the function it was intended to perform by those who wrote the First Amendment."

Yet ever so quietly, the officials who are uncomfortable under press scrutiny are cracking down on the press. An epidemic of news suppression has hit the country.

Attempts to muzzle the press have become worse since Watergate was supposed to have stopped the practice. We have called this phenomenon "Nixonism," after Richard Nixon who tried so hard to intimidate, malign and discredit the press.

In the wake of Watergate, here's what is happening to reporters who dare to dig beyond the official press releases:

— Six newsmen in four states are currently appealing jail sentences imposed on them for refusing to reveal the confidential sources of their stories. In the past four months, 50 other reporters around the country have been subpoenaed. If they betray their sources, of course, the unauthorized sources will dry up, and the people will be able to get only the official version of the news.

— In typical American cities like Indianapolis, Birmingham, Laconia, N.H., and Port Chester, N.Y., reporters who exposed official wrongdoing have been subjected to frameups and false arrests. In Tucson, Baltimore and Washington, harassment has taken the form of intimidation and surveillance.

— In 13 states, judges have blacked out selected court trials and proceedings by banning news coverage of them.

— Court-authorized book burning has appeared again in this land of the free. A book about the CIA by Victor Marchetti and John Marks had to be published with 168 portions purged by court order. A second CIA expose by Phillip Agee is being read in Great Britain but not in the United States, because American publishers fear legal reprisals.

— The Ford administration is pushing a bill that would permit reporters to be imprisoned for revealing public papers and proceedings that have not been officially approved for release, whether or not the papers deal with national security.

— In Hawaii, 10 state senators have carried this trend to its logical conclusion by introducing legislation that would require newspapers and broadcasters to submit to the state government justification, corroboration and an assessment of the expected

Bill Atterberry

The departure of Bill Atterberry from the State Division on Alcoholism constitutes a distinct loss to all of Nebraska's alcoholism programs.

During his short tenure as acting director of the division, he has made great strides in establishing rapport and in righting some of the wrongs which existed in the division's relations with organizations in the private sector of alcoholism treatment.

Theatrical Originals

Lincoln, Neb. As president of Theatre, Inc. Summer Mellerdrammers, accept our sincerest thanks for the excellent coverage The Star is giving our group.

Our actors are not paid personnel. These people represent all walks of life — drama students, teachers, university instructors, secretaries, radio personnel, etc. They are dedicated beyond explanation and fulfill their job as any paid professional actor.

Playing to an "audience participation" theatre is not the easiest form of art. Yes, I mean art! Anyone who claims otherwise is ignorant of "mellerdrammer" information.

Many of our aspiring Lincoln actors received their start on the Mellerdrammer stage. We do not sell it short!

Theatre, Inc. does not in any form try to be a competitive type of entertainment. Many are led to believe otherwise. Since we have been playing to standing-room-only audiences, this is proof that this special art is still popular.

May I publicly thank our many actors, back-stage crew, and last but not least, our enthusiastic director, Mr. Dan Twirling. To the public who is supporting these hard-working actors, our thanks. Our actors' theatrical attitude is tops. The drive they have is genuine and beautiful.

To those who have not experienced a "fun" night — try it. You may want to try out.

LA VERNA
HASSLER

It seems there are those who have a Luther Burbank touch when it comes to growing a garden full of vegetables or flowers.

As if by magic the plants respond and produce the biggest, the showiest and the best of their kind, although any gardener of this caliber would be the first to say it isn't magic. I know it is work.

There lives in our town a green-thumb gardener who raises the common and rare plants, bushes and fruit trees, holly and nut trees.

When I returned yesterday, I felt as if I had visited the land of The Jolly Green Giant. I was given a crisp head of cabbage, a large Chinese cabbage, bib lettuce and plump head lettuce.

I told The Farmer he would be so full of vitamins from all of the green vegetables that he would work around the clock in his fields. "You will not recognize yourself as the same man," I said. "The blood will race through your veins, you'll click your heels and take off."

The rotund, leafy heads of bib lettuce are on the menu for supper tonight. I will wash them, set them on a plate with a favorite salad dressing and each to his own individual head of lettuce. I understand these small individual heads are served in exclusive restaurants for quite a sum. So flaunting a bit of a pretentious air, we will eat exclusively tonight.

It has been my good fortune to be loaned a magazine that includes the history of colonial inns of Williamsburg, Virginia. Also listed is the food that tourists who visit the area can be expected to find in the various inns, served in traditional style.

One pleasant respite for foot-sore tourists can be found at a colonial inn specializing in sandwiches. One sandwich is a scrumptious sampling of roast top round on a hard roll, spread with Dijon mustard. The other is Surry County ham and cheddar cheese on marbled pumpernickel and rye bread. Both sandwiches are served in individual baskets with potato chips and a very interesting dill pickle.

Now, it is the dill pickle that catches my fancy. What makes a dill pickle interesting? Since George Washington ate in these taverns and inns, I have a ridiculous idea. Do the dill pickles come in full dress wearing white wigs, three cornered hats and knee britches, complete with a gentlemen's shirt ruffled at the neck and wrists?

That at least would make a dill pickle look interesting.

"It would be worth a trip to Williamsburg just to see an interesting dill pickle," I told The Farmer. He gave me that look that seemed to say, "When I go to Williamsburg, Virginia, it will not be to look at dill pickles."

People are such interesting creatures to watch and ponder in their various activities. One day I was in a five-and-ten store in the city. A little old lady tripped merrily along the counter near me, looking intently for some item that she could not find, for soon she asked the clerk, "Where are your balloons?"

Why would she be wanting a balloon, I wondered. Surely not for a party. Maybe she had to exercise her lungs by blowing up balloons.

Finally in the course of conversation, it developed she had a cherry tree in her backyard. The birds were eating her cherries and something needed to be done to scare the birds. A friend had told her to blow up a balloon and put it in the cherry tree. The birds would see the balloon, become so frightened they would leave the tree alone.

She sounded enthusiastic enough but my initial thought was that the balloon first had to be put in the tree. Was she going to climb the tree? My next thought was the possibility of the balloon's striking a twig of the tree and bursting in one big "social impact" of their editorials within 14 days of publication.

Thus, with a quickening pace, the vanguard of totalitarianism is gaining ground in America. Its advance agents — a Sixth Column of politicians, prosecutors, judges, legislators and bureaucrats — are busily gnawing away at the great pillar of our freedom: the First Amendment.

This, the first precious freedom in the Bill of Rights, proclaims our right to speak our minds, to inform ourselves, to read, publish, assemble and worship without the approval of government.

The Founding Fathers, who knew all about the aggrandizing proclivities of officeholders, drafted the First Amendment in a way calculated to prevent government from getting around it:

"Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech or of the press." NO LAW. That should have ended it.

But over the centuries, the rights of free men, though they be chiseled in stone, are not much stronger than the people's determination to defend them.

For the Sixth Column is always at work, and its first target is always the press, because the press is the vehicle through which the other freedoms find expression and defense.

Those who are responsible for the spread of Nixonism need not be in a conspiracy with one another. The invisible bond that unites them is a common wish to suppress whatever embarrasses or indicts them or makes it difficult for them to control events within their particular jurisdictions.

The motives of the Nixonites may be lofty or ignoble. The prosecutor who wants to flush out a reporter's source may want evidence from that source or may be trying to silence him.

The judge who sanitizes his courtroom from the public eye may be trying overzealously to protect the rights of a defendant, or he may be doing a favor for a friend, or he may not want to have his judicial rulings second-guessed by the public.

The bureaucrat who resists seekers of information and the legislator who wants to put them in jail may be moved merely by a Colonel Blimp concept of the national good. Or they may be trying to cover up wrongdoing, or acting on the Nixon assumption that the press is the enemy and the more the press is muzzled the better it is for officials as a class.

But whatever the motive of the Nixonites, they seek a power, a control, an orderliness, an immunity which the First Amendment precisely forbids them to seize or aspire to: "Congress shall make no law ..."

In Name Only

It's past time that this hapless, helpless, floundering, leaderless, so-called veto-proof Democratic-controlled Congress got off its duff, moved to adjourn and go home, leaving the field to President Ford who is anything but the strong man we had hoped that God would send us in time of crisis. Compared to Congress, Ford actually looks good, but he doesn't measure up that way, based on his wet-thumb techniques.

Can anyone imagine an energy bill that Ford and the Republican minority would accept from the Congress? So let him go up or down on what he calls his energy program. It will be proven a farce.

Congressional Democrats (and southerners who profess to be Democrats when they run for election to office and then vote Republican the rest of the way) should properly throw the election of a new senator back to New Hampshire voters. My guess is that a fat-cat partisan majority will superimpose their will over the electorate of New Hampshire, thereby adding another digit to an already totally irresponsible Democratic majority (in name only).

Old Jules, A Believer

Trees give man much of which he cannot provide for himself. Oxygen is one thing which we would not have without our trees, or even the lowly weeds by the wayside.

There is enough good Nebraska soil under the highways to feed an army. The pioneers saved Nebraska and the West from strong winds that eroded the soil. "Old Jules" Sandoz became the Luther Burbank of the San Hills with the trees he planted and loved. There is Halsey Forest, originated by Prof. Bessey of the University of Nebraska, the largest man-made forest in the world.

Poems are made by fools like you and me, but only God can make a tree. And the gentle rain that falls from heaven waters and nourishes it so that its roots go deep in the good black soil. The cottonwood was the first tree the pioneers planted because it grew faster than the others in a short time.

We have some beautiful trees on our farm east on O Street. There is an Austrian pine, some beautiful pinoaks, and a wind-break to the west of various kinds of trees.

People said that Old Jules was an unbeliever. There can be no lack of belief in one who plants a seed beneath the sod and waits to push away the clod. He trusts in God.

bang. Then, presto, the birds would be back again. What next? Up the tree with another balloon. Maybe it is the climbing up and down of the tree replenishing the balloons that keeps the birds away. Anyway, I hope she succeeded. Little old ladies shouldn't climb trees.

Three Men Hooked On Old Bottles

By GORDON WINTERS

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Bradshaw — It's one thing to be hooked on the bottle.

It's another thing to go around digging up dirty empty bottles in abandoned dumps in the countryside.

That's the habit of Dale Ratzlaff, Jerry Grosor and Tim McGaffin, who collect old, odd bottles as a hobby.

The trio has unearthed an unlikely assortment.

There is, for example, "Prof. Dean's King Cactus Oil, the Great Barbed Wire Remedy," a concoction produced when barbed wire was introduced in the 1800's.

There is The Mother's Friend, California Fig Syrup and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy.

Real Cure All

The patent medicines of bygone days "would take care of everything, the more things the better," noted Ratzlaff, 30, partner in a body shop

One liniment, he said, was advertised as a treatment for rheumatism, lame back, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, gout, sprains, swellings, lameness, chilblains, frostbite, toothache, headache, backache, and soreness of muscles caused by violent exercise or injury.

"A lot of these had directions for using on both humans and horses," Ratzlaff noted.

Some medicines had ingredients that seem odd in 1975. Muco-Solvent, for example, was advertised as having 3 to 8 grams of opium to each fluid ounce, as well as being 18 to 20% alcohol.

Muco-Solvent was said to cure germ and bacterial diseases. "All these remedies had alcohol in them," Ratzlaff said.

1,500 Bottles

Since they began serious collecting four years ago the three have turned up about 1,500 bottles. Each of the three display them in their homes.

The bottles have many colors — blue, green, black, aqua, brown, amber and amethyst, the latter a light purple that results from the action of sun rays on some types of old glass.

The bottles have contained medicines, whiskey, beer, cough syrup, hair tonic, poison, soft drinks and perfume.

"There's a story behind every one," Ratzlaff said. The poison bottle, he said, had three corners with notches and a round back.

This special shape was to prevent a person from mistaking it for another bottle in the feeble light from a candle or lamp, he said.

Growing Popularity

Bottle collecting is a hobby which is growing in popularity, according to Grosor, 32, a butcher in a packing house. He said that magazines such as the "Old Bottle Magazine" and "Bottle News" exchange news among hobbyists and that collectors put on bottle shows regularly.

Published price lists have also made it possible for the men to put values on their collections. Ratzlaff claims his is worth $3,000, Grosor $1,500 and McGaffin $800 to $1,000.

To find the dumping grounds where bottles may have been tossed the three "walk river beds", talk to oldtimers and visit with farmers, according to McGaffin, 28, a welder.

One dump they found when they spotted the ruins of a bridge on small creek. They followed the faint line of an abandoned road and located a small dump in a nearby gully.

RATZLAFF SHOWS RAKE... which is strapped to arm.

Lot Of Equipment

Over the years the men have assembled a great deal of equipment to pursue their hobby.

They use a shovel, rake, a "come along" to winch heavy pieces of junk out of the way, wire cutters, pruning shears to cut roots, a first aid kit, a rod for probing and a metal detector to locate dumping grounds that have been buried.

The digging is done with a small rake that is belted to the forearm. The men say this helps them avoid breaking bottles.

The hobby has become so absorbing that it is cutting into their hunting and fishing, the three say.

"We still go out fishing, but we don't go out without a digger," Ratzlaff said. "If the fish don't bite we go find a bottle."

Citations Not Planned Over Report's Release

Omaha (AP) — Presiding Douglas County District Court Judge James A. Buckley said Wednesday the release of a sealed grand jury report on some questionable county government practices will not result in any contempt citations.

The judge said his order sealing the five pages of the report applied to court handling of the document from the grand jury. There was no judicial order prohibiting any County Board member from releasing the report, he said.

He said the release of the report "may be a political matter."

Buckley said he sent a copy of the sealed portion of the report to the County Board. He said if the report hadn't been sent, it would have rendered the grand jury's study "a useless act."

The portion of the report ordered sealed in the court clerk's office criticized officials' use of free tickets, passes and vacation cabins from private businesses and criticized some alleged purchasing practices.

The text of the report was published in the River City Review, a journalism review. It isn't known how the publication obtained a copy.

The only copy Buckley gave out went to Board Chairman George Buglewicz. Buglewicz said he made four copies and gave one to each commissioner.

Commissioner Michael Albert kept his copy, and others returned theirs. All have denied giving their copy to anyone.

Buckley was on Naval Reserve duty in Rhode Island when the report was published last week.

8.3% Hold Passports

Caracas (UPI) — Immigration officials say there are 1,000,534 foreign passport holders out of Venezuela's total population of 12 million. The largest group of foreign-born residents are Colombians, followed by the Spanish, Italians and Portuguese.

Mom Says Judge Trying Wrong Son

Omaha (UPI) — A Douglas County district judge Wednesday found a Nebraska Penal Complex inmate guilty of contempt for representing his brother at a trial.

Judge Theodore Richling further declared a mistrial in the case of the brother, Alonzo Atwood, and ordered a hearing to determine how his brother, Lawrence, took his place in the courtroom Wednesday.

The brothers were convicted in 1973 for the robbery of an Omaha restaurant. Richling sentenced Alonzo from eight to 25 years in the Penal Complex and Lawrence from 10 to 30 years.

A Nebraska Supreme Court ruling affirmed Lawrence's conviction, but remanded Alonzo's case back to District Court for retrial because of an evidentiary question.

Wednesday, as the trial was underway, a woman near the rear of the courtroom stood up and pointed to the Lawrence, saying, "You haven't got Alonzo here, you have Lawrence." The woman identified herself as the brothers' mother.

Richling said he found Lawrence guilty of contempt "for attempting to obstruct justice by a appearing in court and by his silence letting everyone else believe he was Alonzo."

In addition, Richling ordered another hearing to determine if there was a "conspiracy between the two brothers or negligence on the part of prison officials or sheriff's deputies which led to today's incident."

The date for Alonzo's retrial was set for July 21, while Richling said no dates had been set for the sentencing on Lawrence or for the hearing to determine what happened Wednesday.

Zorinsky Wants Workers Paid Immediately In Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky has ordered the immediate payment of about 200 city swimming pool workers who were not paid on schedule last Friday.

City officials said the reason for the delay was that the payroll paperwork for the workers was not completed.

Most of the workers are college age, and are employed for the summer. They began work through the first week of this month, and were to have gotten their first checks last Friday.

When the checks weren't ready it was one thing, but when the workers learned that they might not get paid until July 7, there was talk of a strike.

Mayor Zorinsky, who said a story in Tuesday's Omaha World-Herald brought the problem to his attention, said there was no excuse for the holdup.

After a meeting with the city's Finance, Personnel and Parks and Recreation Departments, Zorinsky promised that all workers affected by the delay will be paid Friday.

In all, about 250 workers are affected by the delay, some of them playground leaders in the recreation division.

Another Assault Incident Reported By Illinois Pair

Another alleged attack by a group of black youths has been reported to police by two white Chicago, Ill., youths.

The alleged attack is similar to five others in the past six weeks. Arrests have been made in connection with several of the incidents and youths have been referred to juvenile authorities.

In the incident reported Tuesday night Larry Gran, 17, and John Kwasniewicz, 19, said they were walking on 27th between Vine and Dudley when several black youths got out of two cars and, according to Gran, "started giving them a bad time."

The pair ran. Kwasniewicz outraced pursuers. Gran said he was hit from behind and beaten by six to 10 black youths. He sustained minor scratches on his head and neck, police said. His billfold was also missing, he said.

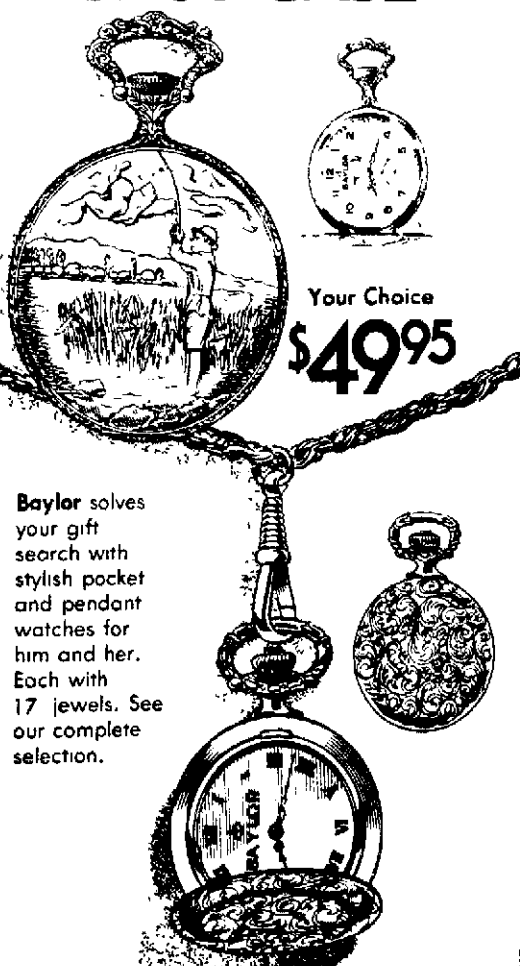

The alleged incident occurred between 11 and 11:30 p.m. Gran and Kwasniewicz said they were passing through Lincoln and were waiting for their car to be repaired.

Elephant Stamp Display Slated

A display of a collection of stamps showing elephants will be on display beginning Friday at the University of Nebraska State Museum at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The collection by Mary Ann Owens of Waukesha, Wis., will be housed in a permanent new display case partially donated by the Lincoln Stamp Club.

Office Buildings For Doctors OKd

St. Elizabeth Community Health Center gained the expected approval of the City-County Planning Commission Wednesday to relocate a proposed medical office building on hospital grounds.

Hospital officials want to build two, three-story office buildings to house 18 physicians and their staffs on a 30-acre tract. The hospital is located on the west side of 70th, near L St.

Planning Director Doug Brogren already has approved the relocation of the first building. In recommending approval of the application, Brogren encouraged hospital personnel to ride the bus to work, thereby eliminating the need for additional parking.

In other business the planners denied Fred Wenske's application to build a laundromat at 33rd and Merrill Ave. He had requested K Light Industry zoning for the primarily residential area.

Residents of the Clinton neighborhood objected to the proposal in a hearing before commissioners last week.

The commission approved another request which was opposed by the Near-South Neighborhood Association. Russell Raybould requested an adjustment to the front yard at the B&R IGA store at 18th and Washington to provide additional off-street parking places.

The planners also rejected Darlene Pedersen's application to rezone 4.4 acres of land in west Lincoln to G Local Business for a shopping center. Mrs. Pedersen wanted the zoning for land located on S. Coddington Ave., 800 feet south of W. Van Dorn. Brogren had recommended denial on the grounds that the business use would have an adverse effect on the surrounding residential neighborhood.

The applications will be forwarded to the City Council for final action.

In other business the commission:

— Approved preliminary plat of Progress South, north of Calvert, west of 7th and east of the railroad tracks — Deferred action on redefining transitional lots.

Ombudsman Hotline Said A Success

By United Press International
A toll-free telephone hotline established in the office of Nebraska Ombudsman Murrell McNeil during the last legislative session to answer constituent questions is viewed as a success by McNeil.

Even at the cost of 60 cents per call, the venture was successful, in McNeil's opinion, because so many Nebraskans across the state utilized the special service.

He said outstate Nebraskans made 47% of the calls, Omahas 25%, and Lincoln residents 28%.

Bills on education, retirement benefits, agriculture, the Equal Rights Amendment, and subjects dealing with the handicapped triggered the most inquiries.

Of all the calls, only about six could be described as "belligerent," McNeil said.

Woman Named Acting Community Development Chief

Mayor Helen Boosalis named a 26-year-old architect to be acting director of the city's Community Development Department Wednesday so the agency would quit "floating around."

Nancy Usnick, a planner in the department since January, will take over the department's reins until a new director is hired.

Mayor Boosalis said she named an acting director after realizing that someone was needed to spearhead neighborhood planning efforts.

The directorship has been vacant since mid-May when Leo Scherer resigned to enter private business.

The mayor said she told Ms. Usnick to oversee the implementation of the department's first-year plan, which recently received approval for federal funds.

A top priority, the mayor said, is the completion of an environmental assessment statement for the Clinton neighborhood. Ms. Usnick explained such statements are needed before actual work can begin in the neighborhood.

Mayor Boosalis also directed the acting director to begin work on the second-year community development plan, which is required in order to receive additional federal dollars.

The mayor and City Council are planning to restructure the department and have been talking about such a move for more than a year. This month the officials agreed to bring in a consultant to help the city do the remodeling job.

The council wants the department to take what they see as a more urban development approach in dealing with community development. That means they want the department to concentrate on redeveloping the downtown and suburban commercial centers as well as neighborhoods.

Ms. Usnick is one of the youngest people to be named as an administrator of a city department. She has a bachelor's and masters degrees in architecture from Texas A&M University.

Before taking the job in Lincoln she worked on projects with the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

Overtime Pay Eligibility Unchanged?

A new attorney general's opinion hasn't lessened the number of state employees who are eligible for overtime pay, according to Roger Schulz, executive secretary of the Nebraska

Association of Public Employees (NAPE).

Schulz said the opinion merely affirms what NAPE has said all along: state employees below the department head, division chief and administrative aide level are eligible to file for back overtime pay.

Gov. J. James Exon received an attorney general's opinion Tuesday which said employees paid a yearly salary to perform a specific job are not eligible for overtime compensation.

Exon said the opinion altered the number of employees who were previously considered eligible. But Schulz disagreed. "Our $8 to $10 million figure for overtime money the state owes is still valid," Schulz said.

The opinion, delivered to Exon in an informal state Tuesday, was supposed to be finalized Wednesday. However, as of late afternoon Wednesday, the finalized opinion was not forthcoming.

A number of former state employees have filed for uncompensated overtime work.

Work Programs Funded

Kansas City (AP) — The federal government has allocated more than $54 million for public service employment programs in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Richard C. McAviney, regional director of the U.S. Labor Department, said the funds were allocated under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Distribution of the funds was calculated by a formula using recent unemployment figures.

He said Missouri would get $27,642,263; Iowa $12,457,146; Nebraska $7,064,454, and Kansas $6,914,166.

Nebraska's funds will be divided as follows: Omaha Consortium $3,757,889; Lincoln $705,964, and balance of state $2,600,601.

ZooMobile Runs From Downtown To Start Monday

People will be able to travel to the Children's Zoo from downtown on the Lincoln Transportation System's ZooMobile beginning Monday.

The ZooMobile will make runs from the south side of Brandeis, down O Street to 27th and then on to A Street and the zoo.

Passengers will be able to board anywhere along the route as well as downtown, according to Dick Frank, LTS manager. Fares will be charged and transfers may be used.

Hours for the zoo trips are Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 10:20 a.m., running every half hour until 4:50 p.m. Wednesday hours are from 10:50 a.m. to 4:50 p.m. on the half hour.

Return buses will leave the zoo from 10:35 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday and 11:05 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, on the half hour.

The LTS board said the service would be extended into August if it had enough passengers.

Life After 40:
Consumer Offices Increasing

By JOANNE FARRIS
President Ford recently took the initiative to urge federal departments and agencies to work closely with Virginia Knauer, the President's special assistant for consumer affairs, to represent consumer interests better.

The President has taken a step in the right direction with this initiative, but it is up to all of us to see that the federal agencies and departments become more responsive to our needs and wishes.

One way to do this is to write to Virginia Knauer when you have a serious consumer problem or complaint. Ms. Knauer is director of the Office of Consumer Affairs of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. You can write to her at HEW, Washington, D.C., 20201.

The Office of Consumer Affairs has published the 1975 edition of the Directory of Federal, State, County and City Government Consumer Offices. The directory is available for 85¢ at the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402. The stock number for this book is 017-000-00140-0.

The new directory discloses that state consumer offices have been opened in 11 more states, and during 1974 there were 13 counties and eight more cities that opened consumer offices.

The local units are the first place to go in government with consumer complaints. When you file a complaint in writing, make a copy of your letter. Then, if you get excellent service and help, you will be able to let Ms. Knauer know about an excellent person in her department.

Conversely, if your complaint gets nowhere at the first level, you can attach a copy of your letter (or better still a copy of your copy) with the followup letter you send up the line to the state office or to Washington.

Sometimes it seems like a lot of trouble to make a complaint and then follow it up through the bureaucracy of either business or government until the matter is resolved to your satisfaction. But it is worth the trouble.

In 1973 a friend of mine shipped a suitcase full of personal items to her daughter in California. The suitcase never arrived. My friend sent out a tracer. The suitcase could not be found. The shipper figuratively shrugged his shoulders and dragged his feet.

My friend called her stockbroker, asked him to look up the name of the president of the shipping company and the corporate address. She wrote the president a clear and specific letter of complaint. He replied by return mail that the matter was being investigated.

Suddenly the tracer began to get results. The shipping agent declared that he had notified shipper and consignee of the arrival of the suitcase at its destination and that he had subsequently notified both parties that the suitcase had been sent to the company's district headquarters for disposal since it had not been picked up at its destination. No such notices had been received by my friend or her daughter.

By this time it was too late to recover the suitcase, but the claim was settled. Hopefully, future shipments will get more careful attention.

Music Festival Will Humm Along

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The Belmont Music Festival, minus the beer and plus about ten deputy sheriffs, will be held as planned this Saturday evening from 4 p.m. to midnight at the Arrow Airport.

The Lancaster County Board unanimously supported granting an amusement license for the six-hour event Wednesday morning, after police and promoters worked out satisfactory security measures.

The dispensing of free beer — a violation of the state liquor laws — will not be allowed at the music festival and only Belmont Enterprises employees will be allowed to camp at the airport overnight, according to the motion presented by Commissioner Bruce Hamilton, who after the meeting purchased two tickets to the concert.

The County Board overlooked a technical violation of the public hearing laws in granting the license. The law requires a public notice of the hearing for two consecutive weeks.

14 Consecutive Days

This means 14 consecutive days prior to the hearing, according to County Attorney Ron Lahners. The request for a hearing came just last week and the advertised public notice ran in local papers only Friday and Monday.

Even if the technical aspects of the law were not met, the spirit of the law was, said Board Chairman Jan Gauger, noting media news reports had carried the message during the necessary two week period and that the packed hearing room Tuesday showed that many people were aware of the hearing.

Belmont Enterprises, a group of about 20 young men, has been working for about three months on the event, billed as both a country western and pop music festival. The company hopes that a successful initial venture will help them get into the promotion business in the state.

The group had been told by county and state officials in earlier conversations that free beer would not be a law violation and that the group did not need an amusement license, the company's attorney F. Scott Rager told the board.

They Didn't Know

Until about two weeks ago they were unaware that they would need the public hearing or the $10 license, he said.

Commissioner Gauger cautioned the group that this license granting is a one-time occasion. The company and the young people attending the concert must prove that this can be an orderly event.

"If you ever want anything like this again, there must be no excesses of any kind," she told the young people in the hearing room Wednesday morning.

"We're willing to give you a chance this time."

Joe Carroll Plans To Be Consultant

After a four-month retirement, former Lincoln Police Chief Joseph T. Carroll is returning to work.

On July 1, Carroll, 65, will become traffic safety consultant for the State Department of Motor Vehicles for $12,000 a year.

According to Motor Vehicles Director John L. Sullivan, Carroll's primary duty will be getting local sheriffs and police interested in $477,000 worth of traffic enforcement programs, similar to the State Patrol's selective enforcement teams.

Carroll's job will be to sell the program to law enforcement officers.

Carroll was a logical person to approach for the job, Sullivan said, due to his 44 years in law enforcement and his rapport with sheriffs and police around the state.

Kennard Minister Sees No Reason For Sasek Firing

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A Kennard minister who was involved in the case against Blair Telephone Co. said he presently sees no reason why the Nebraska Public Service Commission's chief engineer was fired.

The firing, The Rev. Joseph Myers said, is "a hard one for me to understand," he said he was "very surprised" by the dismissal of engineer Gerald Sasek.

Myers said the firing surprised him because no one has challenged or refuted the faults Sasek pointed out about the Blair Telephone Co.'s service.

"Until someone has proven otherwise, I see no reason why he should be fired," The Rev. Myers said.

Sasek performed inspections of Blair Telephone Co. equipment after approximately 100 Kennard residents complained to the commission about poor service.

The rates were subsequently cut by 60% for one year. That order was upheld by the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Monday, the commission majority consisting of Duane Gay, James Munnely and Jack Romans voted to fire Sasek for incompetence and an unprofessional attitude.

Dismissal Opposed

Commissioner Eric Rasmussen opposed the dismissal, saying the majority was doing the bidding of the telephone industry.

Explaining his involvement with the telephone protest, Rev. Myers said, "I got into this because it (the quality of telephone service) was hurting people."

As for Gay, who voted against the rate cut and originally moved to fire Sasek, Rev. Myers said, "Throughout this whole case, I don't know of one instance where he voted for the people."

Sasek Wednesday reported he was hiring an attorney to fight his dismissal. The allegations against him are general and devoid of any basis in fact, he said.

Can't Remember

Commissioner James Munnely Monday mentioned that Sasek had been reprimanded on two occasions. Asked about those reprimands Tuesday, Munnely said he needed time to refresh his memory on the specifics.

When he was questioned again Wednesday, Munnely said he felt it would be improper to discuss the reprimands since Sasek has hired an attorney.

However, sources have indicated that one of the reprimands was initiated by the Blair Telephone Co. for remarks Sasek had made about the firm's management.

Another reprimand, sources said, may have resulted from an inspection by Sasek in Burchard. Sasek reportedly tape-recorded background noises coming over a woman's telephone line. Gay objected to that.

Sasek was also criticized in a letter to the commission from the owner of the Stanton Telephone Co. concerning an inspection Sasek made.

Crime Unit Numbers Too High, Audit Says

State auditors feel that 19 regional crime commissions with over 300 members are simply too many and should be consolidated.

The excessive number of regional commissions dilutes money available and prevents the hiring of full-time staffs, the audit released Wednesday said.

On the average, the audit said only $5,000 was available to each commission — too little to hire a permanent staff.

Efforts by the State Crime Commission to consolidate the 19 regions into nine failed.

Auditors also reported that other state agencies, particularly the University of Nebraska and the Game and Parks Commission, owe the State Crime Commission almost $19,000 to cover tuition expenses for officers sent to the training school in Grand Island.

Some of the problems pointed out by the audit have been corrected, State Crime Commission Director Harris Owens said. One of those is what auditors referred to as an imbalance of representation on the regional crime commissions.

One regional commission, auditors said, had 15 police officials on the 17-member body. On another, 12 of the 17 members were from county government.

Owens said the distribution was realigned "quite some time ago."

The audit also said the regional commissions were not submitting enough information to the state commission to develop a state plan reflecting local needs.

Owens said the situation has improved markedly in the last year. The audit covered the year ending June 30, 1974.

'Get Thrown Out'

"If a guy like me was to try and sell this program, he'd probably get thrown out," Sullivan said.

Carroll eagerly accepted the post because he was getting tired of watching TV and was beginning to get on his wife's nerves, Sullivan said jokingly.

The object of the program, Sullivan said, will be to fund additional equipment and law enforcement officers in areas where fatalities are high.

One such high risk road is U.S. 30 in eastern and central Nebraska, Sullivan said.

The rural and small community selective enforcement funds will be used to hire, train and equip additional officers for county sheriffs and municipal police. The new officers will be employed by the counties, and the counties will be reimbursed by the state.

Usually Low Priority

The program is needed, Sullivan said, because sheriff's are usually undermanned and traffic enforcement is low on their list of priorities.

The selective enforcement officers would be required to spend half of their on-duty time enforcing traffic laws on high risk roads.

The state will fund the selective enforcement officers for two years, he said. After that, the localities will have to decide whether to continue them through local sources.

The total highway safety program for the coming year is budgeted at $1.6 million. Sam Franco is directing that effort.

N-Plant Work Stopped

Brownville (AP) — The Nebraska Public Power District said work stopped on a building project at the Cooper Nuclear Station near Brownville Wednesday when a picket appeared.

An NPPD spokesman said the picket represented Operating Engineers Local 571. The spokesman said the picket arrived at 11 a.m. and members of other crafts on the job did not return to the job after lunch.

No comment was available from the union.

The district spokesman said the picket appeared at the site of an addition to a radiation waste building and at the site of some paving and grading work.

He said the plant remained in operation because the NPPD employees there are not union workers.

Brown Bag Means Business

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

If Dr. Tom Brewer is toting his big brown bag, you know he means business.

And business for the California obstetrician-gynecologist means talking about nutrition, especially as it affects pregnant women.

Weight gain, salt intake and water retention are the traditional tabus for pregnant women.

But wrongly so, says Brewer.

Nutrition is his bag, and that's where the paper sack comes in.

Spilling the contents, he lines the nutritious foods like milk, and eggs on one side, while soft drinks, potato chips, candy bars, salt pork and laundry starch — yes, laundry starch — illustrate the empty calories.

'Completely Blank'

Too many pregnant women suffer from malnutrition, he insists. And their doctors are doing nothing about it, he contends, because the medical profession is "completely blank in this field."

Brewer blames malnutrition for causing metabolic toxemia in late pregnancy, and he's written a book to document this thesis. But he says the medical world has refused to recognize his work. As late as last year medical textbooks declared the cause of toxemia unknown, he pointed out.

Malnutrition leads to low birth weights, and in turn, to increased birth deficiencies, such as cerebral palsy, epilepsy and brain damage.

Each year in the U.S. some 30,000 infants 'needlessly' die and another 200,000 are born with preventable birth defects. Prenatal malnutrition is the culprit, Brewer says.

Doctors who try to keep their pregnant patients' weight gains down to a meagre 12 pounds by restricting salt intake and by prescribing diuretics (water pills) are much to blame, Brewer feels.

11 Years Practice

In 11 years of serving low-income women in public clinics in Richmond, Calif., Brewer has rarely prescribed salt diuretics. In fact, he has publicly campaigned against their use and is delighted the Food and Drug Administration will finally hold open hearings next month to re-evaluate water pills in human pregnancy.

Low salt diets, he says, are another all-too-acceptable standard for pregnant women.

Farmers practice a common-sense policy by leaving blocks of salt around for their pregnant cows to lick on. Brewer can't understand why doctors don't see the connection.

Labeled unorthodox by his peers in the medical profession, Brewer says his work in nutrition is criticized because it lacks a control group.

DR. BREWER . . . expounds his theory of pre-natal nutrition.

"No one has experimentally starved women to see if their babies will be sick," said a frustrated Dr. Brewer. "I can't do the kind of research they are demanding."

He says the basic knowledge about the effects of malnutrition in pregnancy came out about 40 years ago, but the "establishment" insists that nothing is known and more research is needed.

Brewer practices what he preaches in his clinics with low-income women who need total reorientation on nutritional eating. The incidence of low birthweight for his patients is no more than 2-3%, compared with a national average that is "pushing 10%."

Since he finds his medical colleagues hard-of-hearing when the topic is nutrition, Brewer has founded two national groups, the Society for the Protection of the Unborn through Nutrition (SPUN) and Nutrition Action Group (NAG).

He takes his crusade across the country, speaking to groups of young mothers, as he was doing at the regional meeting of the Childbirth Education Association in Lincoln this week.

Lifescope

'Keep Parent And Child Together'

"Hunches and notions," supported by a pinch of research, prevailed when participants in the Midwestern Regional Childbirth Educational Extravaganza studied parental-infant attachment.

Parental-infant attachment is parents relating to their child, not the other way around, said speaker Bobbi Timberlake, registered nurse and childbirth educator at Family Hospital in Milwaukee, Wis.

Although parents and their child go through several periods of attachment throughout the child's life, the most important is immediately after birth, Mrs. Timberlake said.

However, "the opportunity for early attachment in the first hour of life is very minimal," she said.

Whisked Away

According to Mrs. Timberlake, traditionally in American hospitals, newborns are whisked away to the nursery shortly after birth, leaving little time for the parents and child to relate to or get used to each other.

In a research project cited by Mrs. Timberlake, 28 mothers were divided into two groups. The first 14 mothers were separated from their babies shortly after delivery, while those in the second group were left alone with their infants for several hours after delivery.

Subsequent periodic observations revealed that the mothers in the first group were more detached from their children than those mothers who were allowed to spend a considerable time with their newborn children.

"I don't know for sure if earlier contact would make a difference in parenting as we see it today," she said. "But we do have a horrible problem of child abuse in this country. Maybe we can stop this by doing something different in the first few hours of birth.

Mrs. Timberlake said parent-infant attachment is hindered by "hospitals, which put up such a barrier" between parents and newborns.

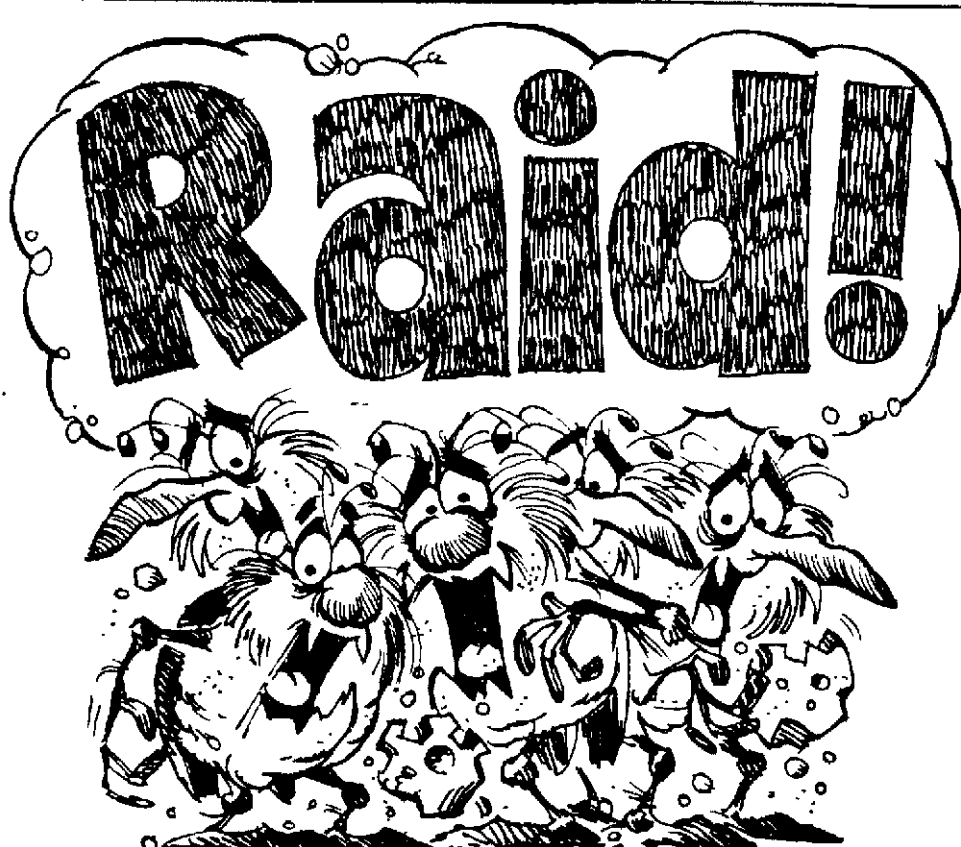

Of course, hospital personnel must be concerned about "the immediate health and welfare of the child . . . but we must also recognize the emotional value" of early parent and child relationships, she said.

"The key thing in the hospital is keeping the father, mother and child together" as much as possible, she said.

You say you don't like Woody Allen's off-beat brand of humor? Okay... tune out now because this is going to be all about Allen, insanity, nurks and the like.

Nurks? Yup, right there on page 180 of Allen's new book, "Without Feathers" (Random House) — in a chapter about Fabulous Tales and Mythical Beasts — we learn about the nurk.

Which is: "a bird two inches long that has the power of speech but keeps referring to itself in the third person, such as, 'He's a great little bird, isn't he?'"

Then there's Sir Arthur Nurney (no relative to the nurk) whose spirit departed in "the most astonishing case of transubstantiation" ever recorded. He "vanished with an audible pop while he was taking a bath and suddenly appeared in the string section of the Vienna Symphony Orchestra."

Plugging Away

For 200-plus pages, Allen keeps plugging away. Irreverent, ingenious, incredible. And those recurring questions won't admit answers: What sort of genetic mutation are we dealing with in the person of Woody Allen? Or was it his childhood? A bad bowl of Wheaties?

What in the name of nurks and nasturtiums makes Allen tick?

In the autobiographical notes following the text, it is stated that Allen's "one regret in life is that he is not someone else."

Perhaps that's the key. An imagination gone wild. Visions of a career playing "Three Blind Mice" with the Vienna Symphony Orchestra.

Who knows? Who cares? The product is sheer genius.

Allen, perhaps more than any other comedian around (excepting perhaps George Carlin), excels with the "zinger." The incongruous conclusion to the logical beginning. (Like the dancer who "in one of the most moving and beautiful passages in any ballet... runs headlong into a brick wall.")

A Bit Too Much?

It is a mystery how Allen can sustain this madness, page after page. For all but the most inveterate Allen fan, an entire book of Allenisms may be a bit too much — at least for one sitting.

However, there's enough variety in "Without Feathers" to keep the onslaught from becoming overwhelming.

Among other things, there are chapters entitled "Examining Psychic Phenomena," "A Guide to Some of the Lesser Ballets," and "If the Impressionists Had Been Dentists," as well as two plays — "God" and "Death."

Allen is in possession of enough data about the world at large to make the comprehension of some of his material contingent on prior knowledge of something. If you're from the Midwest, you can ignore his Brooklyn jokes.

As to the title, Allen credits Emily Dickinson with his inspiration. "Hope is the thing with feathers..." she reportedly said.

The bidding:

East South West North
Pass 2♠ (!) Pass 7♠

Opening lead - nine of clubs.

Despite all the stories you may have heard to the contrary, this was the hand that caused the greatest consternation at the club and launched Sylvia upon her amazing series of adventures at the bridge table.

The deal occurred shortly after she joined the club. There is no question that the Admissions Committee would have rejected Sylvia's application for membership had they been aware of how poorly she played, or how little experience she had had.

But having been accepted, Sylvia did not shy away from the tough games, and, in fact, she made it a point whenever possible to play with the experts.

I was not present when the hand was played, but the bidding was reported to me to have taken place as shown.

Sylvia was South and said two spades after East had passed. Undoubtedly, this was some kind of mental aberration on her part. Perhaps she was counting aloud how many spades she had, or was thinking about a previous hand, but, whatever the reason, West passed and North promptly bid seven.

Sylvia was aghast at this turn of events, but, as usual, she showed no outward sign that anything was wrong. After winning the club in dummy, she led a diamond, and, having learned several days earlier how to finesse, she played the ten.

When this won, she cashed the A-K-Q, discarding a club and two hearts in dummy. Sylvia then finessed the queen of hearts, cashed the ace of clubs and ace of hearts, and ruffed a heart with the six of spades.

Nine tricks had been played and West was down to the Q-10-8-7 of spades. When Sylvia led a club, West ruffed with the seven but was overruffed by dummy's nine. And when Sylvia trumped dummy's last heart with her king, West had to underlead with the eight.

A club lead then trapped West's Q-10 as dummy's A-J scored the last two tricks. So Sylvia made seven spades!

She'd Rather Not Shake Hands

DEAR ABBY: Horrah for the young man who doesn't shake hands with anyone — and don't bet too heavily on the germ theory.

A few months ago I had a right hand painfully sprained when I shook hands with a professional football player.

A few weeks ago, I shook hands with a retired plumber who apparently wanted to prove that he was the strongest man on earth. Result: one fractured bone.

A few days ago, a slightly built law student finished the wrecking job on my hand. This note is written in pain.

If those strong men want to prove their masculinity, let them find another victim. I'm for the Oriental custom of bowing.

SUFFERING IN SCOTSDALE

DEAR SUFFERING! Let's shake on that!

DEAR ABBY: I have fallen in love with a man who has had a past history of mental illness. Years ago, his mother placed him in a state hospital. Now he lives in a half-way house. He sees a therapist weekly and is on medication.

I know he still has some problems, but they're not as severe as they were. I want to have a relationship with him because he has so many of the qualities I am looking for in a man. He said he has never had a relationship with a woman. He is 27 and unsure of himself. I am 21 and on my own.

I know I will have to make the first move because he is not aggressive. My mind is somewhat made up already, but I need assurance that I am doing the right thing. What is your opinion?

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: You are a wise girl to stop, look and listen before you leap. Since I know nothing about the young man's emotional maturity and the seriousness of his mental condition, it's impossible for me to advise you. Please don't initiate a relationship without first talking to his therapist. He is qualified to guide you. I am not.

White Collars Rob Computers

Phoenix (UPI) — Donn P. Parker of the Stanford Research Institute told a group of computer users at a Honeywell symposium here that embezzlement by computer is a fast-growing white collar crime.

The person most likely to use a data bank for illegal purposes is "young, bright, eager and highly motivated," Parker said, "exactly the type of individual you'd like to hire."

"Those who penetrate computer defenses typically consider themselves very moral," Parker said. "They feel it is bad to do harm to people but that harming the computer — or 'the system' — is acceptable. They will often carry out a variation of the Robin Hood syndrome: rob from the rich and keep it."

Rites Held For Lyle Johnson, Paper Executive

Omaha (AP)—Services were held at Los Altos, Calif., Tuesday for Lyle A. Johnson, 56, president of the San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co. and former Nebraska newspaper executive.

Johnson died Monday night while undergoing open heart surgery at Stanford University Medical Center at Palo Alto.

He had suffered heart ailments in recent years. A native of Fostoria, Kan., Johnson became national advertising manager of the Lincoln Star and Journal in 1944.

He worked in Philadelphia, North Platte and Columbus before joining the Omaha World-Herald in 1949. He became business manager in 1954, left the newspaper in 1959 and took over the San Francisco position in 1971.

Survivors include his widow and two daughters, Melissa of Los Altos and Mrs. Sara Neilson of Mountain View, Calif.

Services Set Thursday For Dr. Mountford

Davenport—Funeral services for Dr. F. A. Mountford, 76, longtime Davenport physician, will be at 2:30 p.m. Thursday at Christ Lutheran Church in Davenport. He died Tuesday in Omaha.

A graduate of Hastings College and the University of Nebraska Medical School, he practiced medicine in Davenport for 51 years. He was a native of Smith County, Kan.

A charter member of the Davenport Lions Club, he was also a member of the Masonic Lodge. He was a World War I veteran.

Dr. Mountford served as vice president of the Nebraska State Medical Association in 1955.

Surviving are his wife, Irena, sons, Roger of Davenport and Dr. Stanley of Omaha, daughter, Jeanette Malone of Lincoln, and 10 grandchildren.

Pioneer Insurance Co. To Work With Jackson

The board of directors of Pioneer Insurance Co. has decided to work out the problems of the company in cooperation with Jim Jackson, state insurance director, rather than going into court.

That is the word according to Paul Amen, board member, who said "a court challenge would depend on his (Jackson's) actions."

The board was reacting at its Wednesday meeting to a ruling by special hearing officer Howard Kaslow that Pioneer may be placed in the hands of a conservator. The practical effect of that ruling, according to Bernard Wishnow, Pioneer attorney, was that the State Insurance Department took possession of the company June 20.

Iowan Killed When Car Hit By Semi-Truck

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP)—A Glenwood woman was killed Tuesday when her pickup truck was struck broadside by a semi tractor-trailer at the intersection of Highways 92 and 275 near the Iowa School for the Deaf.

Investigators said Mary C. Fivecoat, 49, died in a hospital here, while her daughter, Mary, 15, was listed in guarded condition Wednesday.

The truck driver, L. D. Snow, 32, of Glenvil, Neb., suffered minor injuries in the mishap, and was ticketed for running a red light.

'Statutory Insolvency'

Kaslow's report had said that the evidence (documents, testimony from May 30-June 3 hearings) "established Pioneer's statutory insolvency."

Kaslow's report found that Pioneer's liabilities nearly equalled its assets, leaving the company on May 6 more than $1 million short of the amount needed to back up its outstanding capital stock. Its surplus or capital is impaired to an extent prohibited by law, he found.

The board feels that Pioneer is in more of an impairment situation," Amen said, rather than being insolvent in reality. Wishnow says that Pioneer had a net operating gain of $100,000 in the first quarter of this year.

60-Day Supervision

On March 20, Jackson placed Pioneer under a 60-day supervision because of a potentially hazardous, sharp decline in the value of a Tehama County, Calif., land development called Lake California. Pioneer holds nearly $5.6 million in mortgages on it.

Kaslow found, according to Wishnow, that the recreational land development had a March 31 fair market value of not more than $5 million and Pioneer's interest not more than $3 million.

Wishnow had said it was a possibility that the ruling would be appealed to district court. The board of directors, however, has a 30-day grace period ending July 21 in which to decide.

Jackson said that the order gives his department the legal authority to run Pioneer while 30,000 policies are being sold and reinsured with other companies, or while the company is liquidated.

Truck Driver Who Abandoned Vehicle Found

Norfolk (UPI)—The driver of a truck which was found abandoned near here about two weeks ago with 16 head of dead cattle in it has been located, the State Patrol office here said Wednesday.

The driver of the truck was identified as Orrin Carstensen, 21, of Phillips, S.D., who called his parents from Carnegie, Okla., and told them he was working with a combine crew in Oklahoma.

Carstensen was on his way to the Bill Willers farm near Hoskins when the vehicle and its cargo were abandoned at a rural intersection for reasons which were not yet known, the patrol office said.

The investigation was continuing.

Detour Caused By Bridge Work

The State Roads Department said Wednesday that asphalt surfacing has begun on Interstate 80 bridges over the Platte River between Omaha and Lincoln.

The surfacing was being done on the eastbound lane Wednesday, with traffic being detoured onto U.S. 6 between the Greenwood and Gretna interchanges.

The westbound lane will be surfaced Thursday with traffic being detoured onto U.S. 6 between the Gretna and Waverly interchanges.

4th Courtroom Stumbling Blocks Tumble

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The fourth city courtroom may soon be a reality as two stumbling blocks came tumbling down Wednesday.

The county can lease space on their side of the County-City Building to the City, according to a ruling by the Attorney General's Office received Wednesday.

And bids for a driver licensing facility at Gateway came in at almost $20,000, much lower than expected, according to County Board Chairman Jan Gauzer.

These two events were necessary in order to provide the office switching in the building necessary to construct the fourth courtroom adjacent to the existing city courtrooms.

'It Looks Good'

"It looks good," said County Commissioner Bob Colin, about the low bids. Colin worked to get the driver licensing office located at the Gateway Shopping Center.

Remodeling work on the Gateway facility will take about 60 days after the bids are approved by the County Board, according to architectural estimates. And the board is expected to take action on the bids within the next three weeks.

When the licensing office moves out of the County-City building to the Gateway location, the city personnel office can be switched to the old licensing space under a lease agreement with the county. This switch will then make room for the fourth courtroom.

The leasing arrangement is legal, according to the Attorney General's office opinion, requested by County Attorney Ron Lahners, though the opinion is hedged with a few ifs.

The leasing of county-side space is a policy decision based on whether the leasing is in the best interest of the county, according to the opinion, written by Asst. Atty. Gen. C. C. Sheldon.

The board can also consider the advantages and disadvantages of both units of government, Sheldon wrote.

The County-City Building is divided down the center by an imaginary line, with all county offices on the south half and all city offices on the north half.

County Atty. Ron Lahners said Wednesday that he still believes the county must consider the space needs of other county offices in coming to any decision to lease county-side space to the city. Several county offices, including the county court and the county attorney, currently need additional space.

The lease proposal, tentatively agreed to by the County Board, would make room on the city side for the fourth courtroom. And Judges, waiting almost two years for the new courtroom, recently put some pressure on city officials, asking them to reaffirm their commitment to this courtroom.

Organizer Hired By IMPACT

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

IMPACT, a newly-planted grassroots organization, has now hired a citizen organizer and has nearly doubled its numbers of sponsoring organizations in the last six months, IMPACT representatives said Wednesday night.

At the organization's first formal press briefing, chairperson Carole Siegman announced that Mark Linder, a trainee of the Industrial Areas Foundation Training Institute in Chicago, has been hired as IMPACT citizen organizer at a salary of $11,000 a year.

A former staff director for a St. Paul, Minn., citizens' organization, Linder will act as a resource person for IMPACT members and will train local citizens to be effective organizers, Siegman said.

Jacqui Herman, acting chairman of the Near South Neighborhood Association, said, "We wanted to be able to consult with someone specifically trained in community organizational skills. We could not afford to do this on our own. In concert with other neighborhoods and churches we can employ such an individual."

IMPACT was organized in April 1974 after 40 Lincoln citizens met in a three-day workshop to discuss citizens' organizations. Through IMPACT, citizens' groups can increase their effectiveness by uniting on common issues, organizers say.

Linder, who was hired June 2, said IMPACT has not yet decided which local problems it will unite on. He will spend the first several months "meeting people and becoming familiar with local issues," Linder said.

Siegman announced that IMPACT now has 14 sponsoring organizations as compared with eight last December. To become a member, organizations must "endorse IMPACT's goals" and either contribute money or take an active part in fund-raising, she said.

Neighborhood organizations wishing to join IMPACT have been asked to contribute $800, she said.

Energy Study Urged As 'Old West' Project

By United Press International

The chairman of the five-state Old West Regional Commission, Gov. J. J. Exon, said Wednesday he plans to ask that organization to explore the possibility of expanding national energy supplies with grain alcohol.

Exon told UPI in an interview he was thinking of suggesting that such a project be undertaken by the Western Governors Energy Policy Office in Denver, Colo., now being set up under the direction of former North Dakota Gov. William Guy.

"I've already alerted that staff to the idea and will now take it to the governors," he said.

The energy office was established by an agreement among commission member states North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana, and the Four Corners Regional Commission states of Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Arizona plus the individual state of Nevada.

The study project would research the feasibility of building a $20 million to $30 million grain alcohol producing plant, even if it would have to be done at government expense.

Noting Nebraska is already involved in gasoline pump experimentation with an alcohol-blended gasoline for motor vehicles, Exon said the least such an undertaking would do would be to extend gasoline supplies by 10%.

However, during a closed-door economics conference held in New York City last week during which Exon was the featured speaker on agriculture, the governor also mentioned the possibility of using grain alcohol as a substitute for petroleum now used to produce synthetic materials.

That special conference, open by invitation only, was sponsored by syndicated columnist Eliot Janeway.

"This could be a tremendous thing," Exon said. "And the best part is that we're talking here about a resource that is renewable each year."

Nebraska Ranks 3rd In Honey Production

By United Press International
Nebraska's honey production last year totaled 10,742,000 pounds, ranking the state third nationally, trailing only California and Florida.

The production was 20% larger than in 1973 and 17% ahead of 1972.

The state-federal division of agricultural statistics said the state has 131,000 bee colonies with an average production of 81 pounds of honey each. That was eight pounds more than in 1973 and three pounds more than the 1972 average.

The average price received by Nebraska honey producers was 49.8 cents a pound, up five cents from 1973.

An important byproduct, beeswax, increased 25,000 pounds from 1973 to a total of 204,000 pounds. It brought an average price of $1.29 a pound, compared with 69 cents the previous year.

Nebraska's sharply higher honey production was contrary to the national trend. The national production in 1974 of 185 million pounds slumped 22% from 1973, even though the number of colonies rose 2%. However, honey yield per colony dropped from 57.9 pounds in 1973 to 44.21 pounds last year.

National beeswax production totaled 3.4 million pounds in 1974, down 19% from 1973.

The national statistics take into account non-commercial beehives. Commercial 1974 production nationally accounted for 102 million pounds of honey, or an average colony yield of 60.2 pounds.

Historically, Nebraska has ranked fifth or sixth in annual honey production, according to Louis Shanek of the Nebraska Agriculture Department.

Bill Waugh of North Platte, Nebraska honey producers president, said Nebraska has more than 100 commercial beekeepers and more than 1,000 hobbyists.

Last year, Waugh said, their production added about $16 million to the food industry of the state.

Japan Growing

Tokyo (UPI) — Japan will have a population of 135,150,000 by the year 2000 up from 114,470,000 this year, according to the health and welfare ministry's Institute of Population Problems.

The institute says the birth rate will level off after the country's population rises to 144,800,000 in the year 25050.

POSTCARD

by

Stan
Aspland

San Francisco — On a warm tropic day off Brazil, the captain blew the ship's whistle — 'who!' 'who!' — and I began flushing the toilet like crazy.

It was a scientific experiment to confound Galileo. When I was getting an education saved off on me, the teacher said smoke spirals clockwise in the northern hemisphere, counter clockwise below the equator.

(I may have that reversed. It was a long time ago. Anyway, the two sides of the world whirl smoke in opposite directions.)

"This is best demonstrated by smoke," she said. "But it also can be seen in the spiral of water running out of the wash basin."

I'd been on that freighter for nearly a month — we were rolling down to Rio — and I was having a hard time tapping out a piece each day.

The captain said "We cross the equator tomorrow. I'll blow this whistle when we do."

In the morning I checked the spiral of the exiting water. It was running in the right direction for the northern hemisphere.

I used the toilet which had an automatic refill. You could keep a continuous movement of water.

When the whistle blew, I started pumping out water.

The blooming water didn't know it had crossed the equator. It kept running out in the same spiral.

I tried it later in the day. No change. But — the next morning it had reversed its spiral. Just as I learned in school days. Could be the captain was off in his navigation.

It's summer at Snug Harbor. The smoke spirals upward (correct spin) from a dozen hibachis.

It is summer and the time has come to cook outdoors.

Of all man's odd ideas, the outdoor barbecue has lasted longest. To my taste, cooking over charcoal doesn't do a thing for steak flavor.

I've tried it with Mexican charcoal. I've topped the fire off with sassafras. I've loaded in cherry tree wood and apple tree bark.

The barbecue's main value is in keeping us humble.

'Ouch! Blast! Hand me the tongs!'

Grease splatters in all directions. But mainly on the cook. It's a holy moment and the holy smoke spins upward in the right turns.

How we got into outdoor cooking is lost in time — I can't remember when we didn't cook on wood. Some kind of madness, some earthly urge grabs modern man.

Across the glowing charcoal falls the shadow of the sabretooth tiger.

Inside the house we have a self-cleaning oven. Pushbuttons lever the temperature up or down.

Bells chime when the meat is done. It is a triumph of man over the Stone Age.

Ak's Gold Cup Attracting Interest

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — Saturday's $100,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes is attracting more interest than any other race ever held at Ak-Sar-Ben.

"By far, we've never had as much interest in the press outside of our usual coverage area," noted Stan Bowker, Ak-Sar-Ben's director of member activities. "We've put in more work on this race than any race since I've been here."

The start of "special events" begins Thursday with a noon luncheon at Ak-Sar-Ben Hall which is expected to attract 70 persons. Those will include the owners, trainers and jockeys who are slated to ride in the mile and 1/16th event for 3-year-olds.

A big board will be used to indicate the horses and their post positions and interviews with the new media will follow.

"That's the first time we've done something like this, although a lot of other race tracks do the same thing for their big races," Bowker said. "At Churchill Downs, they have a brunch for the Kentucky Derby."

Estimating that a record 32,000 persons will attend the races Saturday, Bowker said no additional mutuel help will be employed. "We're already fully staffed on Saturday — all our windows are open on Saturday's," he said.

The 32,000 figure, if reached, would easily surpass the record Saturday and one-day crowd totals. The current one-day record crowd is 29,599 on Memorial Day in 1973 and the largest Saturday crowd was the 27,145 at last Saturday's races.

Among the news media tentatively scheduled to watch the country's only $100,000 horse race on Saturday are representatives from the Omaha World-Herald, Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star, the three Omaha commercial television stations, KOLN-KGIN TV the Kansas City Star, Des Moines Register and Sioux City Journal.

In addition, two Omaha radio stations will carry the live broadcast of the Gold Cup. A radio station in Hot Springs, Ark., will carry the Gold Cup broadcast on a delayed basis.

The Associated Press is planning to send a bulletin lead on the race across the nation and an additional 250 words. That's the first time the Associated Press has scheduled special coverage for an Ak-Sar-Ben race.

Bowker said the Chicago Sun-Times is planning to send a reporter to Ak-Sar-Ben for the Gold Cup.

John McEvoy from the Daily Racing Form's Chicago office arrived Wednesday to report the Gold Cup and next week's $100,000-added Cornhusker Handicap for the turf publication.

"I'd guess that the Racing Form will order at least 20 per cent more forms for Saturday because of the increased interest and attendance," Bowker noted.

Bowker said he has spent more time preparing for the Gold Cup than any other race. A detailed description of each horse, his racing record and breeding will be distributed at the Thursday luncheon.

Naturally, the featured attraction of the Gold Cup is the first Omaha appearance of a Triple Crown race winner.

Mrs. Robert Lehmann's Master Derby, winner of the $150,000 Preakness Stakes at Pimlico in May, is the horse that is commanding the major share of discussion.

"Certainly, bringing in the Preakness winner is the star attraction in this area because the people, unless they've gone to a Triple Crown race, have never seen a horse of this caliber in person," Bowker noted.

Master Derby's stall was the scene of constant activity Tuesday when he arrived at Ak-Sar-Ben at about 2:30 p.m. Newsmen, trainers, owners and Ak-Sar-Ben personnel were anxious to get a "first-hand" look at one of the standouts in thoroughbred horse racing.

On Saturday, however, Master Derby will be on public display as Ak-Sar-Ben braces for the largest crowd ever to watch a sporting event in Nebraska, (except for Nebraska football games).

Junior Women Set Records

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

The Amateur Athletic Union's Junior Women's track and field team that will compete here against the Russians will be a record-smashing group.

The young women qualified Wednesday at White Plains, N.Y., and set records of all sorts in all but two of the 18 events.

Included were eight American record, two performances that tied the American record and six meet records.

Even Nebraska's contingent got in on the act, but failed to qualify any girls for the July 4-5 at Nebraska's Ed Weir Stadium. The Nebraska Track Club mile relay team posted a time of 3:45.3, which equaled the old national record, but that was good enough for only a fourth place finish.

The team and individual splits included Janis Richards of Benkleman (56.8), Connie Micek of St. Edwards (57.7), and Caren Horstmeier (57.2) and Debbie Esser (53.6), both of Woodbine, Ia.

Nancy Kindig of Hastings, who already has earned a spot in the meet here in the Women's Pentathlon, finished sixth in the 100-meter hurdles in 14.5 seconds and was eighth in the long jump at 17.8.

Brenda Morehead, who will be a freshman at Tennessee State in September, won four gold medals to lead the Tiger Belles from Tennessee State to the team championship.

The team is coached by Ed Temple, who will be coach of the U.S. Women's team for the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

Miss Morehead, 17-year-old graduate of Toledo (O.) Scott high school, shattered the American record in the 200-meter dash with a 23.3 clocking after earlier equalling the American 100 meter mark of 11.4 she set Tuesday in qualifying. She also was on winning 440 and 880 medley relay teams.

Some of the other outstanding marks included a 4:23 time by Doreen Ennis of Nutley, N.J., in the 1,500 meters to crack the old meet mark by 21.5 seconds. That's the equivalent of about a 4:40 mile.

In the 3,000, Lynn Bjorklund of the Duke City Dashers ran the race in 9:29.4 to crack the old American record she set a year ago by 41.8 seconds.

One of the top performances was turned in by 16-year-old

Robin Campbell of Sports International when she set a meet mark of 53.4 to nip Pat Helms of Klub Keystone by two tenths of a second. She had gone 53.3 in Tuesday qualifying.

Mary Decker of the Lakewood, Calif., International Club, made her first start of the season but could do no better than 55.3 against Miss Campbell. She was a teen-age sensation against the Russians two years ago, but has not fully recovered from her leg injuries.

The U.S. junior women lost to the Russians last year in the meet at Austin, Tex., and Wednesday's performances bodes well for their chances against the U.S.S.R. here next weekend.

Stewart Vanquishes Tempermental Nastase

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Sherwood Stewart, the lanky bearded tennis player from Baytown, Tex., vanquished Ilie

Nastase in a nerve-tungling, five-set duel at Wimbledon on Wednesday.

Stewart beat the fifth-seeded Romanian 8-6, 6-8, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3 after a disputed line call which had thousands of fans shouting sympathy for Nastase, who usually manages to incur their wrath.

Two other seeded players, No. 10 John Alexander and No. 12 Jan Kodes, the 1973 Wimbledon champion, also bowed on a scorching day that drew a crowd of 37,081, the biggest in the 98-year history of the prestigious event.

Jimmy Connors, the scrappy American seeking his second Wimbledon title, tamed Vijay Amritraj, the Indian Davis Cup star, 9-8, 6-0, 8-6, and Ken Rosewall, the 40-year-old Australian who was runnerup to Connors last year, came a step closer to the only major title to elude him with a 6-4, 6-4 triumph over John Feaver of Britain.

Nine other seeded men advanced on a sunny, busy day where officials were trying to catch up with the schedule fouled by rain on Monday's opening day.

Defending champion Chris Evert led the advance of seeded women, who finished up the first round and got part way through the second. Miss Evert, who drew a first-round bye, handily defeated Elly Appel of The Netherlands 6-0, 6-1.

Paul Kronk, 20, who was the Australian junior champion three years ago, stunned Alexander, a fellow Aussie, 1-6, 9-8, 9-8, 9-8, and Geoff Masters, another Australian, ousted Kodes, of Czechoslovakia, 2-6, 2-6, 6-4, 8-6, 6-4.

Joining the top two seeds in the third round were No. 3 Bjorn Borg, No. 4 Guillermo Vilas, No. 6 Arthur Ashe, No. 8 Raul Ramirez, No. 9 Tom Okker, No. 11 Roscoe Tanner, No. 13 Marty Riessen, No. 15 Onny Parun and No. 16 Tony Roche.

Joining Miss Evert in the third round of the women's draw were No. 4 Evonne Goolagong Cawley and No. 7 Olga Morozova. Mrs. Cawley ousted fellow Australian Helen Gourlay 3-6, 6-1, 6-1, and Mrs. Morozova of the Soviet Union beat Francoise Durr of France 6-3, 4-6, 6-1.

However, No. 8 Kerry Melville Reid failed to get through, defaulting to Sue Barker of Britain early in the second set.

In a first-round match of Australians, Margaret Court defended her No. 5 seeding with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Dianne Fromholz.

Other American men into the third round were Mike Estep, Charles Pasarell, who beat Paul Gerken of East Norwalk, Conn., 6-3, 6-3, 6-1, and Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Ramirez of Mexico, winner of the 1975 Italian championship, had a poor start against Jeff Borowiak before pouring on the ball for a 1-6, 9-8, 9-7, 6-3 triumph over the Californian.

All-Stars Defeat Japanese

Omaha (AP) — Vic Bernal of Cal Poly-Pomona pitched a five-hitter Wednesday night to give the United States a 6-1 victory in the fourth game of the Japan-U.S.A. College Baseball Championship series.

Bernal blanked the Japanese for eight innings with consecutive doubles by Toru Ninomiya and Yasushi Tao producing Japan's only run in the ninth.

The victory padded the U.S. lead to 3-1 in the seven-game series with another game scheduled for Omaha Thursday night.

Arizona State's Ken Landreaux provided two big hits for the U.S. team. His two-run triple highlighted a four-run third inning.

He doubled to left center to lead off the eighth and eventually scored the final run for the American team on a ground out.

Phillies Close On Bucs

By Associated Press

The Philadelphia Phillies rallied from six runs behind to beat Pittsburgh for the fourth straight time Wednesday night and close to within one game of the first-place Pirates in the National League East.

Mike Schmidt drew a bases-loaded walk off Dave Gusti to force home the winning run in the 13th inning. The Phils had loaded the bases on Jay Johnstone's double and a pair of intentional walks.

Homers by Richie Hebner and Riche Zisk helped Pittsburgh build a 6-0 lead, but the Phils charged back behind Greg Luzinski and Dick Allen. Luzinski clouted a two-run homer, his 17th of the season, and a run-scoring single and Allen contributed a two-run triple.

Ron Schueler won it and Gusti lost it, both in relief. Elsewhere in the National League, Cincinnati blanked Atlanta 2-0, Montreal crushed Chicago 12-6, New York edged St. Louis 2-1, Houston shaded Los Angeles 5-4 and San Diego beat San Francisco 6-2.

In the American League, Cleveland dumped Boston 8-5, New York edged Baltimore 2-1, Milwaukee outscored Detroit 7-6 and Chicago topped Texas 5-2.

Sacrifice flies by Joe Morgan and Dave Concepcion accounted for Cincinnati's victory over Atlanta.

Montreal exploded for 10 runs in the seventh inning, the final three on Pepe Mangual's home run, to romp past the Cubs.

Tom Seaver notched his 11th victory and Rusty Staub had a two-run triple in the Mets' triumph over St. Louis.

Cesar Cedeno's tie-breaking triple in the seventh lifted Houston over the Dodgers.

Rich Folkers scattered eight hits and Wilie McCovey had a pair of run-scoring single in San Diego's win over the Giants.

Alan Ashby homered and Rone Harrison and Tom Buskey teamed for a six-hitter as Cleveland beat Boston for the third straight time.

Walt Williams tripled and scored on Thurman Munson's sacrifice fly in the ninth as the Yankees beat Baltimore ace Jim Palmer.

George Scott belted a pair of home runs in Milwaukee's fourth straight victory over Detroit.

Jim Kaat picked up his 11th triumph and Jorge Orta knocked in a pair of runs as Chicago downed Texas.

Jones Leads Junior Meet

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

Following Tuesday's round in the Lincoln junior boys golf tournament, there were four players within three strokes of the lead.

Now, Knox Jones is playing king of the mountain all alone.

Jones, a Southeast High School junior-to-be, fired a six-over-par 78 at Holmes Park Wednesday to take a five shot lead into Thursday's final round.

The final 18 holes, originally scheduled for Pioneer's Park golf course were switched to Holmes by Lincoln Parks and Recreation Director Don Smith.

Smith met Wednesday morning with Max Pennington, president of the Lincoln Men's Golf Association to decide on the final site because of problems with the Pioneer's greens.

"I feel there are a few greens at Pioneer's that we're having problems with and we're embarrassed by it," Smith said after his Wednesday meeting. "We hope to have them back in shape shortly. But I just felt it would be to the advantage of the young men to have their final round score based on ability instead of possibly luck."

Smith said the suggestion for the move was his.

Jones, who's 78 at Holmes was the best score of the day, was looking forward to playing the Pioneer's layout and hoped the final round could be played there.

"You get a little better break from the wind at Pioneer's," Jones said. "Out here (Holmes) is just too wide open. But I score about the same on both courses though."

The wind was a factor during Wednesday's round for Jones and the rest of the field as the hot temperatures coupled with the wind to harden the greens.

"They (the greens) were hard as bricks," Jones said. "You just had to hit short and hope the ball would run up to the hole. You just couldn't hold a host, especially with the wind at your back."

Jones had nine hole splits of 38-40 over the 6,829 yard layout.

The three players all within striking distance after second round play each lost shots to Jones. Mike Schuchart stayed the closest with an eight-over-par 80 giving Jones his five shot cushion.

Chris Swett and Paul Johnson, who carded 74 and 73 respectively in Tuesday's round, shot 85 and 86 over the much-longer Holmes course.

Swett's 85 put him seven shots behind in third place while Johnson's 86 dropped him to fifth place, nine shots back.

Mike Schneider moved into fourth place with a 79 and 243 total while Kyle Fink also shot 79 in the championship flight.

Slow play also hindered scores somewhat according to Jones.

"We had to wait about two groups on every tee," he said. "When you wait 10 to 15 minutes between shots, your swing starts to feel a little funny."

Jones had just one birdie enroute to his 79. He sunk a one-and-a-half foot putt on the par four 18th hole for a birdie three.

With only 18 holes remaining, Jones is just planning to "hit the ball good, and don't gas."

Kosiski Gains Sunset Win

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — The "home court" advantage and a broken rear axle on Kent Tucker's car helped Omaha's Bob Kosiski breeze to a win in the Twin City Challenge race here at Sunset Speedway Wednesday night.

Kosiski, the Sunset Speedway champion for the past four years, showed his knowledge of the track by taking a commanding lead on the first lap of the 35-lap feature.

But once Tucker, who primarily races at Lincoln's Midwest Speedway, got through traffic, he roared to within less than one car length of the leader on the fourth lap.

The two drivers then ran away from the field with Tucker glued to Kosiski's bumper for the next six laps.

Then, on the tenth lap coming out of the fourth turn, Tucker moved to the inside to take the lead and lost a rear tire due to a broken axle sending him sliding into the infield, leaving Kosiski a one-half lap advantage over the field.

Al Humphrey, who moved into second place, gained a third-of-a-lap advantage on the field but could never challenge Kosiski for the lead.

Kosiski and Humphrey, who races primarily at Midwest Speedway, then coasted to a one-two finish.

Joe Wade of Lincoln appeared to have third place captured but engine problems forced him from the race on the 16th lap, leaving a dogfight for his position.

Bill Martin, Glen Robey and Keith Leithoff, all of Omaha, then battled for the last 20 laps but finished in that order behind the leaders.

"I would've liked to see Tucker stay in the race," said Kosiski. "It would have made a really good race."

Tucker quickly agreed, but added, "I really wasn't pushing him and feel that I could have taken the lead at any time."

"We just didn't have much go right for us tonight," said Tucker, who had to extinguish a fire in his car on the warmup laps for the feature.

In the trophy dash, Tucker had a little better luck. On the last lap of the eight-lap sprint, leaders Kosiski and Ed Morris collided on the final turn, allowing Tucker to take the win.

"They (Kosiski and Morris) were hogging the track and just got a little out of shape, and I was lucky to be in the right spot to take them because there was nothing else I could do," said Tucker.

Mike Houston of Omaha led throughout to capture the 15-lap B feature ahead of Paul Zdan, who took second ahead of Jerry Reeder of Columbus.

Heat winners included Humphrey, Kosiski, Morris and Al Druesdow of Omaha.

The drivers will return to Lincoln's Midwest Speedway on July 9 for the Twin City Challenge finale.

Detroit Tigers manager Ralph Houk kicks his hat after being thrown out of the game in the third inning against the Milwaukee Brewers. Houk argued with home plate umpire Larry Goetz after Brewers second baseman Pete Garcia scored on a double steal.

First heat — 1. Al Humphrey, Giltner; 2. Kent Tucker, Aurora; 3. Larry Jiskra, Council Bluffs; 4. Mark Weicher, Omaha; 5. Rex Jordan, Lincoln, (10 laps).
Second heat — 1. Ed Morris, Omaha; 2. Joe Wade, Lincoln; 3. Bill Martin, Council Bluffs; 4. Randy Steiner, Blair; 5. Mike Houston, Omaha, (10 laps).

Hunters Warned Of Subtle Foes

Problems to Hunters

Roger Latham, former president of the Outdoor Writers Assn. of America, told his fellow writers the greatest dangers to hunters are not necessarily the obvious opponents.

Leading a panel of speakers at the 48th annual OWAA conference last week in Lake Charles, La., Latham said the opponents hunters should fear most are the subtle foes who are reaching youngsters before the youngsters have a chance to form their own opinion of hunting.

The Pennsylvania outdoor writer said Walt Disney's numerous wildlife films are common foes of hunting, never shedding the hunter's role in a good light.

Another opponent along this line is the average school teacher and school programs. The reason, according to Latham, is that children are not properly educated in the mannerisms or the reality of death.

"Teachers have not been indoctrinated in the facts of life," Latham said. "Parents aren't much better for the most part. This problem is not as severe with farm life than it is in the big city. In the city, there is no real life and death. On the farm, death is a common occurrence."

Interestingly, a report from a physician recently claimed there may be more truth to what Latham says than not. Children watching television see one man die in one program but he's back to act in another and another.

The physician then pointed to the increasing number of child suicides in relating some of this "no such thing as death" philosophy is rubbing off wrongly on young TV watchers.

Hunting Is Permissible

Latham points out these people in urban areas are ones largely responsible for the movement against hunting as a recreational sport, but said hunting is permissible by law.

"Hunters rarely become anti-hunters," Latham said. "But very few anti-hunters ever become hunters. I don't really know why that is."

Hunters are a healthy and happy group, for the most part," he added. "That's probably due to the exercise and fresh air they expose themselves to. I imagine that's why people hunt in the first place. Perhaps that's why the anti-hunters are against hunters. They are not largely happy or healthy by my observations."

Latham further pointed out many anti-hunters are not fully informed about hunting and its role as a game management or surplus wildlife harvester.

He used the robin as an example. "The robin is a protected bird. It is not hunted," he explained. "Therefore, it should stand to reason, every year we'll have more and more robins. But it doesn't happen that way."

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

"We cannot stockpile wildlife," he said. "Robins produce millions of offspring annually but that doesn't increase the population. The excess birds die a natural and often violent death and the populations remains about the same. Hunters make use of this excess in the species they hunt. It's like harvesting a grain crop, a renewable resource."

Latham said anti-hunters are too often narrow-minded in their thinking concerning the preservation of various species of wildlife.

"Ask an anti-hunter about a snake in his backyard or bats in his attic or other such forms of wildlife," Latham said. "See how well they perform in protecting those species. They tend to be very selective in what they like and don't like."

"One thing we have to do is teach kids in our schools that death is a way of life," Latham said. "Most animals die a violent death, maybe to a fox, a hawk or a car. How many kids see things die today, especially the city kids?"

"They never see things die," he answered. "Then when it does occur, it is a severe and traumatic experience they don't know how to cope with. I think that's doing our youngsters a severe injustice and puts them through something that's unnecessary."

Lincoln Youths To World Meet

Boys Town — Four Lincoln youths have qualified for the Wilfredo Massuer World Infantile Wrestling Championships at Mexico City July 4-5.

The four earned that right by finishing among the top six here last weekend in the Central Region 6 AAU tournament, which drew more than 600 competitors for 3,000 matches.

The Lincoln qualifiers, who compete in the bantam division for the Auld Recreation Center, are Jeff Schmalken, 7, third at 75-pounds, Jamie McCauley, 8, fourth at 45 pounds, John Nelson, 7, sixth at 45 pounds; Jay Dowell, 8, sixth at 55 pounds.

First National Beats Ralston

Ralston — Mark Haas and Mark Harrison combined for a one-hitter here to lead Lincoln First National Bank, now 4-1, over Ralston, 3-1, in an American Junior Legion game.

Haas, now 3-10 as a pitcher, also knocked in one run with teammate Greg Smith driving in two runs with a bases loaded single.

Pro Bowls Set

New York (AP) — The National Football League turned over one of its post-season plums, the Pro Bowl, to its two new expansion cities Wednesday and Seattle and Tampa returned the compliment by immediately assuring sellouts for the game.

Col. Sanders Drops Two

League leading Colonel Sanders was defeated twice Tuesday night during AAA slow pitch action at Elks Field.

Barry's, who won two games and shutout Colonel Sanders, 8-0, was led by the hitting of Dave Berkland. Berkland had five hits in seven attempts as Barry's completed its two-game sweep with a 11-3 win over Ace TV.

In the nightcap, Dave Booreson's three-run home run highlighted Sam's to a 9-2 whipping of Colonel Sanders. Booreson also picked up the pitching victory.

Tennis Lessons Set For Second Session

Japanese Give Omaha Money

Omaha (AP) — The Japanese Baseball Federation, here for the Japan-USA College All-Star baseball series, Wednesday gave $500 to the city to aid in tornado relief efforts.

Tornadoes ripped the city May 6, killing three persons, and causing an estimated $150 million in damage to homes and businesses.

Mayor Edward Zorinsky accepted the gift from federation officials and thanked them for the much needed money.

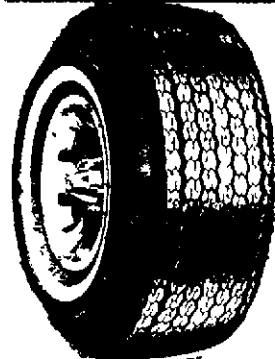

Zorinsky said Omaha will reciprocate, but that he hopes a similar disaster does not befall a Japanese city in the future.

Three of the series games are being played here, the other four in Los Angeles, Calif.

Voc Ed Council Agrees On Three Goals For Schools

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Responding to "a challenge from the economic crisis," the Nebraska Vocational Education Council Wednesday agreed tentatively on three goals for Nebraska schools.

Local school systems should:

- Appeal more strongly to students who leave school early, by eliminating reasons for dropping out.
- Reappraise the employment market, to prepare students for changing opportunities.

—And use school facilities for occupational education on an extended-hour basis — after hours and on weekends — to make students and adults more employable.

The council made the recommendations at a Lincoln meeting, and will meet again in August to agree on final proposals. The council serves the State Board of Education, which must approve any of the recommended goals and priorities before they can be put into force.

Serving "early school leavers" better, said Council Executive Director C. A. Cromer, "involves the total educational system," and not just vocational education.

Cromer said school critics maintain students leave school because the offerings are unsatisfying or irrelevant to their future needs. And "the drop-out further complicates this unemployment problem," he said.

Council recommendations on career education would give purpose, relevance and meaning "to every student," and each's future employment and livelihood, he said.

The employment market must be reappraised, Cromer said, because many employment opportunities for which students receive training no longer exist.

"Our community colleges are very sensitive to this," but other systems are not.

The State Department of Education offers assistance to schools in setting up and promoting adult work-study and retraining, and the best setting is in schools that maybe used during lull periods or vacations, Cromer said.

The advisory council also recommended maximum use of Comprehensive Employment

Training Act (CETA) funds for vocational education that are channeled through the Education Department, 5% of the state allotment.

While avoiding creation of gaps or duplication, the funds should be used strictly for occupational skills, the council decided.

The State Board of Education last month allowed part of those funds to be used for training allowances, with a one-year limit. Once the CETA program (which replaced the Manpower Development Training Act) gets fully underway, Cromer said the "state resource" should be used for only skills training as intended.

Phelps Says School Officials Must Unite

Because school administrators are "speaking out of many mouths," their impact on state and national education decisions is negligible, Omaha Westside Community Schools Supt. H. Vaughn Phelps said Wednesday.

To produce a "coordinated voice" for American education leaders, Phelps called for establishment of a national coordinating council to represent school administrators.

Now, he said, voices of acknowledged leaders never emerge or are seldom heard from the confines of their limited-member organizations.

NEA and AFT have "moved more to a welfare posture" for their members, Phelps said, adding he believes that's appropriate. The "prime ingredient" in that move has been collective bargaining negotiating for contracts.

"Now teachers have a great loyalty to their education association," in which administrators formerly had leadership hand, Phelps said and that causes a rift.

"It changes the relationship between a superintendent of schools and the operation of schools, and his or her staff."

That also results in a protective stance by teachers against superintendents and boards of education, he said.

Improved Work Urged

"I think that's all right," Phelps said, but called on administrators to improve their work in the labor relations field, yet responding to board and community policies and pressures.

Administrators must recognize the expertise and professional role of teachers, who "want a greater say in the operation and control" of their schools, Phelps said.

Need for that recognition has emerged rapidly, he said, because of spokesmen such as AFT head Albert Shanker. But administrators no longer have any nationally recognized spokesmen, he said.

"If you and I call ourselves leaders in American education," Phelps said, "and we don't provide that leadership, who will?"

One administrator in the audience said it's difficult to speak out, given the constraints imposed by local boards. Phelps replied, "We need a lot more gutsy administrators in our schools than we have."

CIA Portrayals Set

Hollywood (UPI) — Del Rager and Rick O'Connell have been cast as CIA men in "All the President's Men," starring Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman.

Other merged administrators' groups have demonstrated their clout, such as in California: The 12,000 members each contribute .7 to 1% of their annual salaries, producing a $2 million budget, he said.

Such clout could be broadened to a national base, he said, explaining that administrators no longer have true representation by the National Education Association (NEA) or the American Federation of Teachers (AFT).

The NEA might soon allow first-time re-election of its president, James Harris of Des Moines. That fits a "union pattern," Phelps said, by putting the president in the "power position," much as George Meany wields with organized labor.

Poll: Viet Immigration Opposed Columbus 'Smokeys' Have CB Radios, Too

By LOUIS HARRIS

Even though more than five out of six Americans welcomed the Vietnamese orphans, a 49-37% plurality opposes the immigration of Vietnamese refugees into the U.S.

People primarily object to Vietnamese immigration because they feel it will put a further strain on our unemployment rate. They also believe the U.S. miscalculated about the desire of these war refugees to leave their country and come to America.

A 62-28% majority believes the immigrants will take jobs away from Americans, and an 85-7% majority feels that there was too much panic about rescuing refugees from Vietnam and the U.S. should arrange to send back to Vietnam those who want to go.

The public's strongest argument for allowing the refugees to stay and integrating them into American life is its support of our tradition as a sanctuary for Europeans fleeing oppression of their homelands. A 49-40% plurality believes "this country began with people of all races, creeds and nationalities coming here to escape religious or political persecution, so we ought to let the refugees from Vietnam in."

Recently, the Harris Survey asked a cross section of 1,428 adults:

"Do you favor or oppose allowing 130,000 Vietnam refugees to come to and live in the United States?"

The cross section was asked the following series of questions about the Vietnam refugee problem:

"Let me read you some statements some people have made about our allowing refugees from Vietnam to come live here. For each, tell me if you tend to agree or disagree."

What's New in Lincoln. Illustrated feature stories in the "Sunday Journal and Star" keep you informed Columbus, Ohio (AP) — Long-haul truckers use citizens band radios to let other drivers know when they've spotted "Smokey the Bear" — trucker talk for a radar patrolman lying in wait along a highway.

In Columbus, "Smokey" has a CB radio, too. And he tells truckers where to find him.

Columbus freeway patrolman Keith Evans, 27, got a CB and took the CB name or "handle" of Casper last November. Since then, 12 other Columbus freeway officers have bought their own units and taken their own handles, Casper said.

Official city permission to use the CB units came in March, Casper said, after the officers had proved the CBs have helped. Casper believes that letting truckers know the location of radar units helps control traffic. He said his speeding arrests have not decreased since he began broadcasting his location. "The idea behind my job is to slow people down, not see how many tickets I can write," he said.

Cooperation with truckers also has become a two-way street, Casper said.

Truckers and other motorists with CB units tell each other when a motorist is in trouble, enabling police to get there faster than the driver can telephone for help. Warnings from truck drivers that someone is "driving funny" have increased drunken driving arrests, he said.

Casper said he's heard the fame of his unit and those of fellow "Smokeys" with handles like "Grabber," "White Ghost," "El Camino" and "Phantom Bear" has spread as far as Florida, Kansas and Massachusetts.

Still, truckers are surprised on a first visit to Columbus, to report spotting a radar unit — in trucker talk, "Smokey sittin' in the grass takin' pictures" — and hear Smokey himself correct the location. Or having his report of a Smokey heading west answered by the Bear asking, "would you rather I turn around and go east?"

One trucker coming up on Casper's radar unit asked the officer to "take his picture." He said he wasn't sure his speedometer was accurate and said he didn't "want to give the state any green stamps for speeding."

Malpractice Insurance Solution 'Temporary'

By United Press International
A state official said Wednesday just because there is now a firm willing to write malpractice insurance for Nebraska nurse-anesthetists does not mean that all insurance problems have been solved.

"I still very much feel that we need legislation for a permanent solution," said Alan Wickman of the State Insurance Department.

Wickman said the reason he, as well as others in the department, feel that way is that the approval last Friday of a rate schedule for St. Paul Fire and Marine is in reality only a "temporary" solution to coverage problems for nurse-anesthetists.

An insurance void was created earlier this year when California Union Insurance Co. announced it would drop its policies in force in Nebraska as of October.

"It's a temporary solution to that insurance is now available," Wickman said.

He said the real problem in malpractice insurance coverage is rates.

"They now have insurance available, and I have no reason to suspect that St. Paul will drop its coverage," he said. "But if the number of claims continues to go up as they have been, who will be able to afford insurance? The cost of insurance will simply be out of reach."

Under the rate schedule filed by St. Paul and approved, the annual insurance premium is $1,146 per nurse-anesthetist for basic coverage.

The basic coverage, which can be either increased or decreased, provides coverage for up to $100,000 per claim and up to $300,000 a year for all claims filed against any one person.

The decision by California Union was a particular concern to Nebraska as out state areas where anesthetologists, those who are licensed physicians as well as anesthetists, are in short or non-existent supply.

In Lincoln and Omaha, anesthetologists are readily available

Wickman said that after California union announced its decision, another company, Glacier General of Montana, had indicated it would write insurance for nurse-anesthetists.

However, Wickman said, both Glacier General and California Union were "non-admitted" insurance companies in that they are not registered through the department to do business in Nebraska.

Non-admitted firm, he said, may write insurance in Nebraska but only if the admitted firms do not offer the specific kind of insurance being sold.

St. Paul, the official said, is an admitted firm and already sells malpractice insurance to Nebraska's physicians in a program supported by the State Medical Association.

Market Fends Off Doubts, Reaches 15-Month High

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fended off some early doubts about interest rate prospects to reach a 15-month high with its fifth straight gain Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials advanced 3.67 to 872.73, its highest close since it finished at 883.68 on March 26, 1974.

The closely watched indicator now has picked up 44.90 points over the past five sessions and is less than 20 points below its closing peak for all of last year of 891.68.

Advances outpaced declines 847 to 571 among the 1,848 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume was a moderately active 21.61 million shares, down from 26.62 million on Tuesday.

The market was virtually stalled for most of the morning as short term interest rates continued their recent upswing.

But prices moved ahead a little more strongly early in the afternoon when some key money rates were reported to have eased off.

Brokers said uncertainty over the longer range interest rate outlook might have been heightened by Treasury Secretary William E. Simon's assertion that the federal government would have to raise $73 billion in new cash in the fiscal year that begins July 1, based on present projections.

That would account for 50 per cent of all the borrowing in the securities markets during the fiscal year, Simon said.

Varian Associates, the volume leader for the second straight day, soared 2 1/2 to 17 1/2 on turnover of 514,600 shares. The issue had jumped 3 1/2 Tuesday on the company's report that it had developed a new smaller solar energy cell.

MCA jumped 3 1/2 to 74. The company said the movie "Jaws" had grossed a record-breaking $7.1 million in the first three days after its release by Universal Pictures, and MCA subsidiary.
